

EVERY GAME WE'VE EVER PLAYED — RATED INSIDE!

Official @Magazine

Issue 10: Holiday 2000

Dreamcast™

TONY HAWK 2
REVIEWED

GET THE
BEST STUFF EVER!

WE PICK THE BEST
DREAMCAST GAMES
& ACCESSORIES

QUAKE III
STAR WARS
STARLANCER
TONY HAWK 2
GUILTY GEAR X
CAPCOM VS. SNK
SOUL REAVER 2
SAMBA DE AMIGO
RESIDENT EVIL 3
TEST DRIVE LEMANS
METRO STREET RACER

RPG BLOWOUT!

GRANDIA II
STRIKES BACK

PLUS:
SKIES OF ARCADIA

imagine
MEDIA WITH PASSION

$7.99US $8.99CAN

URE PS-A-LOT

IT'S A DIRTY JOB, BUT SOMEBODY'S GOTTA DO IT.

The Army Men® franchise makes its smash debut on Sega Dreamcast™! As Sarge, you must undertake 16 daredevil missions to rescue your Commandos from the clutches of General Plastro and the evil Tan army.

An arsenal of explosive weaponry is at your fingertips, including M-60 machine guns, bazookas, sniper rifles, flamethrowers, grenade launchers, and more. For a little R&R, play battle mode with up to three friends, choosing from nine different characters.

Only you can bring peace to the Plastic World again.

Good luck, soldier!

Oh, and watch your step.

 Dreamcast™

ARMY MEN: SARGE'S HEROES™ © 2003 The 3DO Company. All rights reserved. 3DO, Army Men, Sarge's Heroes, and their respective logos are trademarks and/or service marks of The 3DO Company in the U.S. and/or other countries. MIDWAY and the Midway logo are trademarks of Midway Amusement Games, LLC. Used by permission. Published and distributed by Midway Home Entertainment Inc. under license from The 3DO Company. Sega, Dreamcast and the Dreamcast logo are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Sega Enterprises Ltd.

Not all sports live up to the name Extreme...

EXTREME
CHES
CHAMPION

EXTREME
CHES
CHAMPIONSHIPS

Are you ready for
THE REAL EXTREME?

Welcome to the world of full contact, high octane, Xtreme Sports.

Choose from six different alternative sports as you battle your way through a challenging triple event competition. It's a prize pending race against time... and some hardcore opponents. Blister fast at motorbikes, trucks in need to hard racing combat. So leave your rules book at home. Adrenaline is the only fuel you'll need!

XTREME
SPORTS

Xtreme Sports © 2009 Infogrames. All rights reserved. Published by Infogrames Entertainment, S.A. Xtreme Sports and Infogrames are trademarks of Infogrames Entertainment, S.A. All other trademarks and registered trademarks are the property of their respective owners. Dreamcast and the Dreamcast logo are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Sega Enterprises Ltd.

BEST STUFF EVER: HOLIDAY BUYER'S GUIDE Y2K_30

SOUL REAVER 2_62

RESIDENT EVIL 3_65

65

FEATURES

WHAT A CROP OF FEATURES WE HAVE FOR YOU THIS MONTH!

>HO-HO-HOLIDAY

DREAMING.....30

Better than watching it's a Wonderful Life or a replay of the Macy's parade on a sleepy, tryptophan-fueled Thanksgiving afternoon for getting you into the holiday spirit, our massive gift guide super-spectacular has the best bags of swag, the worst lumps of coal, and everything else you need to know for the best Dreamcast holiday ever. There's even a Christmas comic for good measure!

>RPG MANIA.....42

Skies of Arcadia. Grandia II. Grandia II. Skies of Arcadia. Need we say more? Yes? Okay. We bring you complete, in-depth (as in, many pages each) reviews by ODCM's resident roleplaying expert extraordinaire, our own Francesca Dangler Reyes. Did we mention that Danger is her middle name?

COMING SOON

WE'RE TAKING GAME PREVIEWS WHERE GAME PREVIEWS ARE GOING

GUILTY GEAR X 60

The cult of 2D fighting gets another entry into its pantheon on Dreamcast, as a sublime, high-resolution 2D fighter gets ready for Japanese release.

SOUL REAVER 2 62

What's worse than a reanimated vampire who's crawled his way up from the depths of Hell? A reanimated vampire who's crawled his way up from the depths of Hell and is really pissed off...

COASTER WORKS 64

Get direction from the park owner. Build coaster in 3D. Ride coaster. Vomit. Very, very original, and very, very cool. (Hint: try not to make the cars fly off the tracks.)

RESIDENT EVIL 3 65

Venovide not enough? Capcom's got plenty more survival horror goodness for us, starting with this prequel. Prepare to be scared out of your wits.

CHICKEN RUN 66

Like chicken pot pie? Don't play this: your goal is to help the beautifully animated chickens escape from the death camp they've been born into.

EVIL DEAD 2 73

Ash. The Necronomicon. Bruce Campbell. A man fighting against his possessed hand. The greatest cult horror movie ever gets the Dreamcast treatment.

BANG! GUNSHIP ELITE 73

Fight the good fight in space. At least we think it's the good fight. In any case, you have had beam weapons, so who really cares why you're fighting?

SONIC SHUFFLE 74

Sonic and gang enter the thrilling world of mini-game madness! Party fun for everyone ensues.

CHARGE'N BLAST 76

Lots of explosions. Lots of giant guns. Lots of you making giant explosions with giant guns. Ain't nothing wrong with that.

IRON ACES 77

Flying in the Pacific in World War II against the Imperial Air Force is a test of skill, endurance, and adrenaline tolerance. Cool.

BANGAI-O 77

Oh, baby. Bring on the oldschool shooting action with the treasure in Treasure's hard core line-up. We can almost smell the power-ups from here.

DEPARTMENTS

>DC-ROM 06

Why just read about the latest Dreamcast goodies when you can actually play some too? Exactly. Check out the Disc page, to find out what's on the latest denso CD-ROM, a combined effort of the ODCM staff and Sega of America, crafted with pride in the "multimedia gulch" of San Francisco.

>D-MAIL 08

So important it's delivered to us by a uniformed representative of the State, your comments, questions, complaints and compliments always get top priority here at the ODCM world headquarters in scenic Brisbane. Ahh, sweet Brisbane—the pride of San Mateo County, California, and truly the City of the Stars.

>ENDZONE 111

This was going to be all about a prime dome free/price reviewer who demanded notes to work in order to actually get his copy in, but then didn't even take screens, and then handed in everything late, but we decided that just wasn't cool to write about. Instead, it's some funny stuff. Check it out.

TESTZONE

A MASSIVE CROP OF GREAT GAMES GETS REAPED IN THIS ISSUE

TONY HAWK PRO SKATER 2 78
Ok, you know how good this one is.

METROPOLIS STREET RACER 84
Real racing on real streets. Really.

SEGA MARINE FISHING 86
What other game lets you catch nearly extinct Coelacanth fossil fish? None other fishing games.

LOONEY TUNES

SPACE RACE 87
Awesome moon-shaded racing that feels like a real cartoon. Solid.

CAPCOM VS. SNK 88
The dream of all 2D fighting fans is finally answered.

STARLANCER 90
It's like SpaceWar! in space. With multiplayer, of course.

SAMBA DE AMIGO 92
Shake your maraca. Shake your Amigo. Shake your booty all night long.

RED DOG 93
Tank combat "tanken" to the next level. Sorry. That was punny, though, no? Oh.

QUAKE III 96
The ultimate 3D shootfest comes home. And goes online.

XTREME SPORTS 96
Boarding, Bungee-ing (is that a word?), ATV-ing. Hang gliding. In a tossed salad rally mix.

POD: SPEED ZONE 97
Online futuristic racing from Ubi Soft. Did we mention it's online?

TEST DRIVE LEMANS 98
Oh my god. A great Test Drive? You bet. This, is the absolute real deal. A better closed-track racing game we've not seen.

4 X EVOLUTION 100
Pro-wheelin' four wheelin', with online goodness to boot.

STAR WARS: DEMOLITION 101
Bad on PlayStation. Good on Dreamcast? We're not going to tell you here. Turn to page 101 for the final results.

TESTZONE ARCHIVE 104
Every DC game rated! Right here, right now! Who loves ya, baby?

HOWTO

BECOME MORE POWERFUL THAN YOU CAN POSSIBLY IMAGINE!

IT'S A CODE EXPLOSION!

Cheaters never prosper. Unless they read this wonderful magazine, and get the lowdown and the down low on how to beat, cheat, trick and fake out the toughest games in the Dreamcast universe. This month we expose:

Wacky Races, Fur Fighters, ESPN: Int'l Track and Field, Sega Bass Fishing, Rush 2049, Aerowings 2, NBA Showtime, and Magforce Racing

Holiday Notes

MASTER MIND

ANOTHER MONTH, another free (for subscribers, anyway) Bonus Issue. And what an issue it is...

The Dreamcast market is glowing white hot right now, and it shows in this issue... Two 10s. Five 9s. More 8s than I can count. We practically didn't have the score budget to even give that many high scores.

With so many sweet games out this time of year, it's tough to know just what to ask for during this holiday season. Why is it so tough? Because, face it, it's a little embarrassing to ask for $500 or $600 worth of software, which is what you're going to need to get every good DC game that'll be out before the end of the year. We feel your pain (and your greed for games).

To make things a little easier, we've picked the best of the best, chosen a few other goodies small enough to fit in a stocking, and cited some nuggets of coal to avoid—and wrapped it up in a beautiful package for you starting on page 30 (The subscription card in this issue should have some little Sonic stickers on it. Grab those and stick 'em on the games you really need. Circle the rest—the ones you just really, really want—and pass the mag on to your most cash-infused loved one).

Oh, and since you'll probably have some time off over the holidays, it's the perfect time for some heavy RPG love—especially since there are two amazing new RPGs on Dreamcast to love. Grandia II and Skies of Arcadia. Check out our massive 13-page guide to the most beautiful role-playing games ever, beginning on page 42.

Okay, that's it. Happy Holidays!
—Chris

Tue Story: These days, Sue's mom offered to pay for a movie/food/spa session for her because she was up freaked out by Fran's "D'por" (dumb) cakes.

IT'S EVEN WRAPPED!

This is DCCM's gift to you—a spiffy disc packed with action-packed, rip-roaring demos and movies or no less than TEN highly anticipated Dreamcast titles. So don't say we never gave you anything for Christmas but a link in your neck from reading, okay?

We've teased you throughout the past year with the hazy outlines of two of the biggest RPGs ever to come to Dreamcast—Phantasy Star Online and Grandia II—and the exclusive movies on this disc will finally give you a chance to see them in action! You'll also find goodies like the Toy Commander Christmas Surprise, plus demos of some of the coolest (and hardest) racing games around. And don't forget Kao the Kangaroo, of course. He's taking for some action: Just like you, we suspect.

Now, here's the part where we would normally say, "Less reading! More demoing!" But since we're in the holiday spirit (and since you're probably standing in or near a Dreamcast-stocked retail store right now), we're going to direct you instead to let us buy this magazine! We tear it out of the aluminum disc, check out our definitive Dreamcast Holiday Buying Guide inside, and d) start shopping (in that order). Our advice to you this season? Dream big!

GRANDIA II

SPEED DEVILS ONLINE

PUBLISHER: SEGA RELEASE: NOVEMBER PLAYERS: 1

The original Speed Devils made quite a splash when it debuted at the Dreamcast launch over a year ago. It's ready to take the game online with the release of Speed Devils Online. Although the demo only lets you now offline, check out two of the tracks in either of two different cars to see just how different the quasi-sequel is.

Stick: Steer
D-Pad: Rear View/Loggia
N/A

N/A Reverse
Brake

Brake
Accelerate

PHANTASY STAR ONLINE [MOVIE]

PUBLISHER: SEGA RELEASE: NOVEMBER PLAYERS: N/A

One of the most anticipated games of the coming year will break the corner of online roleplaying for the console masses. The movie on this month's disc gives you a sneak peek at some of PSO's different worlds and environments, along with some up-close looks at how battle will play out along with the character creation mode. Commence drooling now.

Stick: N/A
D-Pad: N/A
N/A

N/A
N/A
N/A

N/A
N/A
N/A

F355 CHALLENGE: PASSIONE ROSSA

PUB: ACCLAIM RELEASE: OUT NOW PLAYERS: 1

Heven't had a chance to check out the arcade driving sim created by Taito? Well, now's the time to test your skills in a two-lap Arcade run in a Ferrari. Choose from two different training courses and follow the guides to learn just how precise and detailed this driving sim really is.

Stick: Steer
D-Pad: Steer
N/A

Assist: Select
N/A
Assist: On/Off

Reverse
Forward

KAO THE KANGAROO

PUBLISHER: NIS RELEASE: NOVEMBER PLAYERS: 1

Someone besides Midway is ready to rumble, and his name is Kao the Kangaroo. This simplistic platformer spotlights the cute, boxing-wearing kangaroo at his platforming best, and this month's demo features one of the 25 stages available in the full version of Kao. Collect coins while rock'n sock'n bad guys—and look oh-so cute in the process.

Stick: Move Character
D-Pad: Move Character
Jump

Punch Shoot
Tail Whip

Safe Sleep
Close-up View

TOY COMMANDER CHRISTMAS SURPRISE

EXC: EXCLUSIVE

ODCM has the golden opportunity to share one of the coolest US exclusive games to ever leak out to the public: No Ochie's Toy Commander Christmas Surprise. NOTE: When you select Toy Commander from the menu, you'll come to a blue screen then a black screen. Don't worry! It hasn't crashed! You must wait around 30 sec, and the game will begin.

Stick: Steer/Move
D-Pad: View Change
Fire/Action

Cancel
Character Profile
N/A

Accelerate
Drake

ROGUE SPEAR

PUBLISHER: MAGES RELEASE: NOVEMBER PLAYERS: 1

The follow-up to the hugely popular action strategy Rainbow Six, Rogue Spear promises the same exciting assault gameplay coupled with more missions and more options. Play through the single mission on the demo to get a feel for the game if you're new to the genre, and learn the controls in order to protect your team and catch the enemy effectively.

Stick: Look Around
D-Pad: Peek Left/Peek Right, Interact/Menu

Move Forward
Step Right
Step Left

N/A
N/A Run
Fire Weapon

GRANDIA II [MOVIE]

PUBLISHER: SEGA RELEASE: DECEMBER PLAYERS: N/A

Two words for you Epic RPGs. And now gamers in the US will finally be able to get a good look at the gameplay, battle systems and tear-inducing beauty that is Game Arts' labor of love, Grandia II. Should you buy it? Should you steal it? Read up on one of the must-have RPGs of the year, in this issue's exclusive feature-length review!

Stick: N/A
D-Pad: N/A
N/A

N/A
N/A
N/A

N/A
N/A
N/A

POD: SPEEDZONE

PUBLISHER: SEGA RELEASE: OUT NOW PLAYERS: N/A

Futuristic racing in the form of Pod: Speedzone is coming to DC and bringing network play along with it. Check out the demo of the Arcade mode of the game and race in either the Crab or the Cougar craft to see if you have what it takes to come in first against a slew of tough opponents. Read our review of the game in this issue!

Stick: Steer
D-Pad: Change View
Turbo Boost

Use Item
N/A
N/A

Brake
Forward

SEGA MARINE FISHING

PUBLISHER: SEGA RELEASE: OCTOBER PLAYERS: 1

The sequel to the outstanding Sega Bass Fishing, Sega Marine Fishing takes its far-casting act to the open saltwater for an infinitely more varied dip into the fish-tastic barrel of gaming. It's time to drag out that trusty fishing controller from the closet, and put it to work on a demo stage of the game which will challenge you to reel in some creatures of the deep.

Stick: Reel
D-Pad: N/A
Reel/Cast

Castnet
N/A
N/A

N/A
N/A
N/A

HAVING TROUBLE?

Having problems getting your disc to run? Don't get one with your copy of this fine and upstanding publication? Send your name, mailing address, subscription number (if you are a subscriber), and the issue's date to: dischelp@imaginamedia.com and provide a brief description of what's wrong with the disc as well. IMPORTANT! This contact address is not for game news or information. If you have questions concerning game codes information or Dreamcast news, please forward your inquiries to Sega or the appropriate third party.

Help: dischelp@imaginamedia.com

A long time ago in a galaxy far, far away...

TOTAL CARNAGE!

From the creators of Vigilante 8[™]
and
Vigilante 8: 2nd Offense[™]

STAR WARS DEMOLITION[™]

The Carnage Begins November 2000

demolition.lucasarts.com starwars.com

© 2000 LucasArts Entertainment Company LLC. © 2000 LucasArts Ltd. & TM All rights reserved. Used under authorization. The LucasArts logo is a registered trademark of LucasArts Ltd. PlayStation and the PlayStation logos are registered trademarks of Sony Computer Entertainment Inc. Sega, Dreamcast and the Dreamcast logo are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Sega Enterprises, LTD. Vigilante 8 and Vigilante 8: 2nd Offense are trademarks of Activision, Inc. © 1998-2000 Activision, Inc.

Team ODCM

IF LIFE WERE A VIDEOGAME (and we often mistake it for one at ODCM) we'd like to think of ourselves as a lone band of fighters, dueling against evil in a world gone horribly wrong. And in this crazy virtual world, there aren't three forms of the final boss...only one. And we'd make tons of gold in order to buy the best equipment, like super cool healing herbs, the latest mythril armor, and super speedy 64's. But then again, we have a magazine to do...dragon slaying can wait.

CHRIS CHARLA
Editor-in-Chief/Swordman
The fearless leader of our motley crew, Chris is, inevitably, the swordman with more raw power than magic skills. Well, that would be true if his strength weren't based on developing Internet test adventures in his spare time.

Enemies, beware of his super secret Baby Oscar Special! It's a doozy.

DAN FITZPATRICK
Art Director/Psart
Quiet and subdued, Dan is the mediator of the group. When beyond his years and willing to design items in dangerous situations, he saves the day early to follow his destiny on the beaches of Hawaii. Despite his strong faith, he's chosen to chase after a wild sunset Ukelele, capturing her with a golden band.

DIMA FAYER
Managing Editor/Mage
Oh, we see you're not a big spells that use stuff like Thunder, Fire or Water in it, but if you equip her with the Platform Shoes accessory and a copy of Quirk 4, she's practically invulnerable to damaging stuff attacks and bad evil. Can turn into dark magic around deodads.

FRANCESCA REYES
Senior Editor/Samurai Mascot
Strong in Aesop's fables, you may not get many physical attacks out of Francesca, but you can be assured that she'll be there in a pinch with a healing herb or maybe even some healing elixir and dressing like a miniature spot. Just ask Enix. He's had Bahamut summoned on his ass more than once by her.

DAVE GORDON
Associate Art Director/Bard
Armed with a mouse and some serious Photoshop skills, Dave was one of the quickest party members to the punch...until recently. After being hit with a Cheese spell by a fat mutton, Dave's class has changed from Fighter to spooey Bard. Thankfully, he retained his crazy lethal Lightning technique.

EVAN SHAMOON
Associate Editor/Warrior
What fighting, what not to be complete without the hot and sexy sword warrior? The quickest to the punch, but slow to gain in Willowow, Evan is often the guy who gets the girl into trouble by choosing a skirt into the village tavern. Recently leveled up with an Affordible Housing potion.

STAFF ILLUSTRATIONS BY MASA K.

100% Independent?

Hey guys, I just wanted to let you know what a fantastic magazine you have. I bought ODCM issue 07 for the web browser and the Sonic Adventure 2 preview and was so impressed that I sent a subscription card that day. What I want to know is, why is Sonic Team Independent from Sega? What does this mean? Does it mean that they will develop games for "gasp" Nintendo or "GASP" Sony? Thanks for your time. Again, awesome mag, guys! Keep up the good work.

Chris

sinko25@msn.com

Hey Chris, there seems to be a lot of confusion regarding what will happen to Sega since its formerly internal development teams were split off into independent companies. For now, all of these teams are only involved with making games for Dreamcast, NAOMI and NAOMI 2 arcade boards (as well as the occasional PC and handheld port). There have been rampant rumors about some of them taking their acts to other platforms, but Sega has remained very firm in its proclamations that this is untrue.

We here at ODCM have heard it all (both the rumors and the denials), and we doubt that any of the teams will be developing for other systems under the Sega brand for a long, long time. On a side note, we've also

Fighters' Destiny

I was wondering if somebody like Capcom might pick up some of SNK's licenses for games like King of Fighters 2000, Kowalewski, or Cool Cool Toon. Neo Geo Pocket Color was a great system, but it had too big of a competitor: the Game Boy Color (which, I might add, Nintendo cracked my mother into buying me as a Christmas gift). So until something happens with SNK's games, I'm going to keep on playing Card Fighter's Clash. You might even see me sneak over to my Dreamcast to play King of Fighters: Dream Match '99.

Ben Lorman

SNKboudkz@aol.com

Will Reber and her Cool Cool Toon charms come to the US?

Right now, Ben, it's all rumor and innuendo about who might take over some of SNK's classic franchises. It's been written that Capcom would take them over, but it's still only a rumor even if it seems like a perfect fit. But, until the end of the year, SNK is still producing games for Dreamcast in Japan (Last Blade 2: Final Edition being its last; it releases on December 7 in Japan). After that, it's rumored that the company will focus its efforts on Pachinko games under its parent company, Amuze. It's a shame, especially since King of Fighters and Samurai Showdown are still much beloved among us more hardcore gamers, but we'll simply have to wait and see if another third party will pick up the pieces and make a run at some of the profit to be had from us finicky fighting otaku in Japan and the US.

Emulation, Ahoy

I just got the November issue of ODCM (it was excellent as usual) and I was interested in the topic of the letter of the month regarding piracy. I agree 100% with your response about Dreamcast piracy, but I'm wondering what your opinion is on 'dead' systems.

For instance, Radiant Shogun for Sega Saturn routinely sells for $150 or so on eBay and there are no stores left that carry new Saturn software: is Sega reaping any benefits from this $150 dollar sale? Answer: NO. Therefore, my question is: is it unethical to pirate software from dead systems?

I have never pirated a game in my life, but I would like to challenge you with this question because it seems not nearly heard through the grapevine that this rumor always strikes fear into the hearts of third party publishers who release games on competing systems, simply because Sega is such a revered game developer in Japan! No third party wants to compete with games like At Land Radio or Shermue. But for now, it looks like they have nothing to worry about; Sonic Team et al are still Sega acolytes. So relax, folks—as 'black and white' as your previous answer. I could be wrong. What do you think?

Dreamcast is still the only place to see next-generation Sonic.

Kent

Gameofyou@aol.com

Sorry to be the bearer of bad news for EMU freaks, but legally, even to dead systems and unsupported software, the issue is still black and white: whether the game or system is being actively marketed or not, the rights still belong to someone, and it's still an infringement to pirate them. It's harder, of course, to say that you're taking cash out of someone's pocket if you pirate an 'orphaned' game, but while that moral argument may no longer apply, the legal one definitely still does.

Hikaru or Naomi?

On page 17 of ODCM issue 08, you say that Planet Harriers is based on Sega's NAOMI board. I read online that this title is to use the Hikaru board. You might want to look into it, because I believe Hikaru isn't quite as easy to port to DC, but the chances of a port are still pretty good anyway. Love your magazine; your outlook on things meshes mine. I think you've found yourself a lifetime subscriber. Keep up the great work.

Aaron

AFHammer@aol.com

Aaron, as far as we know right now, Planet Harriers is built for the NAOMI board, as Hikaru (according to our sources) is built in the wake of NAOMI 2's announcement. We could be wrong about this, so we're still checking into it—but no confirmation as of press time has been heard. The importance is crucial, as NAOMI-based games can be DC ports in no time at all! We'll be running more previews of Planet Harriers as we hear more news on the game, so keep an eye on future issues, Aaron.

Free (Down) Loading

I have a question for you guys. Recently, SegaNet launched and every one who signed up was REALLY happy because they could finally play some NFL2K1 or whatever online. But some people who are just too damn lazy to pay $21 a month for SegaNet or any other service (like me) get left out of this. This doesn't mean that I don't want to go online—quite the opposite! So what I am trying to ask is, could you guys PLEASE put a list of any FREE ISPs that are compatible with the PlanetWeb browser in your next mag? Pretty please? Thanks a million!

J Rome
Via email

Where should we begin, J Rome? There are literally a ton of free ISPs available and all of them are compatible for online gaming via SegaNet. NetZero is one, as well as Earthlink and a host of others, so you'll want to shop around to find out which one is best for what you're planning on doing. The only thing that might be a negative about using these ISPs for online gaming through SegaNet is that the lag time might be significantly increased during peak user times like early evening, etc. But if the free deal is too good to pass up for you, then your best bet would be to check out NetZero or Juno.

Whatever Happened To...

In DDCM issue 07, you promised me...er...everybody...a Sonic Adventure 2 interview and tell-all report when my DDCM came. I headed straight over for my Dreamcast, slapped the demo in, ran toward the nearest table and started scannering the pages for Sonic. This, etc., about three or two out the window when I didn't find anything [of course, I read the Shermie section first!]. But anyway, what gives?

Tristan Fleming
Jflem12@bellsouth.net

Unfortunately, at the time that this particular issue went to press, we were informed that Sonic Adventure 2 would have a ship date far earlier than the one it actually turned out to have.

We're going to blame the blue hedgehog for this one, guys. But he's looking sharp.

Sega told us that it was going to be a holiday 2000 or early 2001 game, the company also promised that we could have complete coverage of the title, complete with interviews. But the game turned out to be more on target for a Christmas 2001 release, instead—so there just wasn't any new information we could give you.

We do promise to blow the cover on the game wide open as it gets closer to release...wherever Yuji Naka and Sonic Team is willing to talk more openly about it.

Second Coming

I'm a big fan of the Resident Evil series and I absolutely loved how Code: Veronica looked and played on Dreamcast. Lately I've been hearing talk that there is a version of Resident Evil 2 for the Dreamcast, but I haven't seen it on store shelves. Is there any truth to this rumor?

Milford Kane
Oblivion82834@Juno.com

By the time you read this, Milford, Resident Evil 2, along with its survival horror brethren (Resident Evil: Nemesis and Dino Crisis) should be hitting or just about to hit store shelves. As upgraded ports of the PC versions, all of these games will sport some new features (although they're mostly cosmetic, not gameplay-related) to set them apart from their PlayStation counterparts. Start scouring those stores!

Bronx Cheer

I know it's Thanksgiving, but I just couldn't think of a way to thank Sega for such a great system with great games at a great price without sounding smug, so here are some questions and comments instead:

1. Any news on Virtua Fighter 4?
2. Is Last Bronx coming to Dreamcast? In my opinion, it's the best weapons fighter that no one knows about. An updated version of this game on the DC could give Soul Calibur a run for its money.
3. We got JoJo's Bizarre Adventure, but not Vampire Savivors? How bizarre.
4. Lastly, I'd like to nominate D2 as the best rental game on DC this year. It's original, beautiful, intense and disturbing all at once. You can beat it in one (albeit long) sitting, but you go away satisfied. And if you like hunting, you just may end up buying it.

Daniel Goodman
danielgoodman@hotmail.com

Daniel, are you sure you don't want to simply carve up a turkey for us and serve some cranberry sauce all around to give thanks? Ah, didn't think so. So, instead, we're giving thanks back by answering your questions:

1. Sega Japan has just unveiled the fact that a mysterious game is getting ready to show off its latest arcade board, NADAM 2. I simply called Virtua Fighter X. Sadly, that's all we know as of press time about the project, but if the time you read this, more info will be available. We'll be sure to cover it to the fullest extent of gaming law in a future issue.

2. No news of Last Bronx making a splash on DC, Daniel.

3. Bizarre, for real. Vampire Savivors (Darkstalkers is the US) would be a great coup for DC, seeing as we've had pretty much all of the other Capcom greats (sans Megaman), but we'll have to wait and see if it gets announced for Dreamcast release.

4. Though it was a little on the short side, we agree 100% with you about D2. Atmospheric and strange, we're hoping that Warp comes back to gaming in the future to give us an update on what Laura may be planning to do for her next adventure. But don't hold your breath for a sequel.

MP3 Player

I am a hardcore Dreamcast gamer and I enjoy your mag 100%. I plan on buying/renting some quality games as Tony Hawk's Pro Skater 2, Jet Grind Radio, and Shenmue. Being the gamer that I am, I have practically no space (since I've been to the exact left in my VMU, and I plan on purchasing the MP3 player VMU rather than a memory card. This brings me to the inevitable questions I must ask:

1. When does it come out in the US? I can't seem to find news about it anywhere but in your mag, but it's very vague as to when it comes out.
2. How much game saving memory does it have? The usual 200 block standard, 400 blocks, or (dare I say it) a whopping 800 blocks of game saving power?
3. What are your favorite DC games?

Someone is anxious to get their hands on an MP3 DC peripheral, right? Well, then read on, Sean:

1. Right now, Sega is still 'evaluating' whether or not to bring out the MP3 player in Japan and the US. We've heard conflicting reports on all three of that point to the MP3 player not being released at all here in the States! Gasp! But the official answer from Sega is: 'An MP3 solution' is being developed for Dreamcast, but a time frame for its release has not been decided. 'Hmmm...you make the call, Sean.'

2. Though nothing is currently known about a possible 'MP3 solution' VMU according to Sega, we do know that Sega Japan is planning on releasing a 4X memory unit with the launch of Playability Star Online. We're hoping that the same unit will release here in the States.

3. A quick poll of favorite DC games around the office goes a little something like this:

Even: Tony Hawk ProSkater 2, Jet Grind Radio, Power Stone, MDK2
Francesca: Jet Grind Radio, Shenmue, Skies of Arcadia, Grandia
Chris: Tony Hawk ProSkater 1 & 2, Test Drive LeMans, NFL2K1
Art Dept: Huh? We're tryin' to work, here!

Ticket to Ride

I'm mostly into Dreamcast sports games since some of the other games are kinda weird (Typing of the Dead??) I mean, come on! plus most of the sport games are pretty fun if you get the right ones. Anyway I'm into BMX games and I'm looking forward to both Mat Hoffman and Dave Mirra. But since I'd rather not get both, it's like to know from your point of view which one is better? Does Tony Hawk 2 have more levels and stuff then the first? I got to into the game that I beat it with every skater!

Mat Hoffman due in Spring.

Mat (DC sports game fanatic)
Mattymatt10@aol.com

Hey Matt, you might not have to choose between the two! Mat Hoffman Pro BMX has been delayed until spring next year, because Activision wanted to make sure that it was up to snuff with its other extreme sports franchise, Tony Hawk's Pro Skater. And with Dave Mirra Freestyle BMX coming out this holiday season, you can get it freely since it will be the only BMX game on the shelves for this year. As for Tony Hawk 2, make sure to check out our full review of the game in TestZone!

Sky Strobe Patrol

The most recent DDCM issue 09 was dynamite, it had the best demo disc by far...However, one of my most anticipated games, Skies of Arcadia, had a warning about flash/strobe effects in the beginning! I'm a chronic migraine sufferer (one of the worst cases) and I really, really, really want the game but how bad are the flashes/strobing of white light? Is it just the spells or what? Could someone like me play this game?

FOR

Philipdr@hotmail.com

Thanks for the support, Philip! We can all sympathize with your situation, but unfortunately we don't have any helpful advice beyond recommending that you consult with your doctor regarding the situation. After playing Skies of Arcadia, we can safely say that the strobe effects are all contained within the spells, but depending on your condition, it's hard to say if they will be severe enough to trigger a seizure. We'd hate to make a wrong call on this one, so your lawyer would have a seizure, too. Philis, we sincerely hope that you will find a safe way to play the game, but please ask your doctor before attempting to do so.

MIGHT MAKES WRITE

Who was it that once said that the holiday season is one of the loneliest times of year? Well, it certainly doesn't have to be. In fact, since we're all stuck here in the office turning the giant gobs known as magazine publishing and DDCM during the few hours of Christmas Eve and beyond, we'd love to hear similar tales of woe from the great scribes known as 'the outside world.' Write us with your gaming queries and we can all share the experience. We promise. Snail mail: DDCM, c/o Imagine Media, 150 N. Hill Drive, Birmingham, CA 94005. And we dig email, especially at: dcmag@imaginemedia.com. Nappy holidays!

Virtua Fighter

The Animation

The most classic of all
3-D fighters returns!

FREE POSTER!!!

Send in two proofs of purchase from any Virtua Fighter: The Animation videos and get a free poster by mail!!

Mail your two proofs along with $3 shipping/handling in an envelope to:
Virtua Give Away
c/o Media Blasters Inc.
265 W. 40TH Street, Suite 700
New York, NY 10018

www.Media-Blasters.com

Available at these fine stores:

BEST BUY

Turn On the Fun!

EYE
For Your Entertainment

MEDIA

PLAY

SUNCOAST
Motion Picture Company
We Know Movies

SAVING PRIVATE

AVOID Mistake

Speed Devils

ONLINE RACING

Attention, sinners. The most infernal arcade racer ever now runs online. All the hellish tracks, tricked out cars, and shady side bets from the original Speed Devils return — plus 11 new cars, and 21 new ways to put your hard-earned cash, car, and street rep on the line. Hey, leave the "legal" sports for those cornfed boys down the street. SegaNet just got itself a red light district.

SEGA.NET

ONLINE
MULTI-PLAYER

www.ubisoft.com

Dreamcast™

Ubi Soft
ENTERTAINMENT

©2000 Ubi Soft Entertainment Inc. Speed Devils and the Ubi Soft Entertainment logo are trademarks of Ubi Soft Inc. All rights reserved. SegaNet is a trademark of Sega. All other trademarks are the property of their respective owners. Ubi Soft Entertainment Inc. is not responsible for any damage to your computer or other equipment caused by the use of this software. Ubi Soft Entertainment Inc. is not responsible for any damage to your computer or other equipment caused by the use of this software. Ubi Soft Entertainment Inc. is not responsible for any damage to your computer or other equipment caused by the use of this software.

THE HIGHWAY TO HELL NOW ONLINE.

ART: GOOD FOR WHAT AILS US

Fun Lovin' Criminals

Keeping the City beautiful

In honor of Jet Grind Radio's impending launch, Sega sponsored a celebration of videogames, graffiti and the art of Kyrion-inspired self-expression by the Bay, in downtown San Francisco. And your chums at ODCM were there to soak it all up.

Responding to San Francisco Mayor Willie Brown's dastardly attempt to foil the event (see sidebar), Sega Prez Peter Moore delivered the following statement: "While a portion of the game's storyline does involve graffiti art, it is portrayed within the context of creative self-expression, not vandalism. Sega does not condone graffiti as an act of vandalism with the release of Jet Grind Radio."

"We have to give Sega street cred for drawing the line in the sand, so to speak."

This game is appropriately rated "T" [Teen] according to ESRB guidelines, and it contains a warning screen at the beginning of the game, so that parents and teens together can decide if the content is appropriate.* He also noted that Sega would donate a percentage of Jet Grind Radio's profits to the San Francisco Neighborhood Beautification program, which goes toward eradicating graffiti vandalism.

We hate tagging, but we love graffiti art, so we have to give Sega some street cred just for drawing the line in the sand, so to speak. And the winner is...? San Diego artist Sake (pictured with gas mask) took home first place (and a nice $5,000 cash prize), Christopher Kinney came in second, and Paul Giannini placed third.

Mobile Assault Tour

Riding herd on this graffiti-dotted event was the Sega Mobile Assault Vehicle, which routinely tours the country spreading the Dreamcast love. The Vehicle packs a variety of games to play (in addition to Jet Grind Radio), and provides snacks, goodies and Jet Grind T-shirts to those intrepid players who ventured into its co-guarded innards. (Is the look inside worth it? One guy walked out of the trailer, looked at his friend, and said, "Jesus—that just made my day." Draw your own conclusions.) Don't want to come indoors? Try your hand at the kid- and adult-sized jeep/kiosks outside.

THIS MONTH

WHAT WE'RE TALKING ABOUT

Roll out the artwork	14
Shenmue 2 update	18
Dream on	18
Separated at birth	18
Dream Studio dreams	19
Transatlantic anime	22
For Your Information	22
Sega eats bizkits	23
Who's your Amigo?	24

"The City spends more than $10 million a year removing graffiti tags."

For the best book you'll ever read about the art of graffiti (amongst many other things), pick up Bomb the Suburbs by William Uspki Wimsatt. Head to your local bookstore or over to <http://www.softskull.com/html/bomb.html> to get yourself a copy.

Tag, they're it

As crowds milled around them, the finalists began working on their creations at 10am and finished just after 2pm. Then a panel of five judges—which included both the lead game designer and the lead art designer from Jet Grind developer Smilebit, plus DJ Chewie Gomez, graffiti artist Haze, and Rob Zombie drummer John Tempesta—perused the work and determined the winner: San Diego artist Sake took home first place (and a nice $5,000 cash prize). Christopher Kinney came in second, and Paul Giannini placed third. The piece to the right was done by Paul Giannini, and was our personal favorite.

The police presence at Segpa's Graffiti is Art event was huge—and a little confused. Most of these guys think of spray paint as an off-the-shelf version of cocaine.

Mayor Battles Good, Clean Fun

IF YOU DIDN'T THINK GRAFFITI WAS art before, Mayor Willie Brown's reaction to Segpa's Jet Grind Radio graffiti contest would be enough to convince you.

San Francisco's mayor—who looks distressingly like the little man from Monopoly—was hopping mad that Segpa was encouraging graffiti, apparently not understanding that graffiti as an art form was different from straight out vandalism. "It's probably too late to stop this," said a mayoral spokesman, "But we're going to press them to take this promotion out of San Francisco and Justin Herman Plaza."

Art IS SUPPOSED to inspire this kind of protest from the establishment, isn't it? Anyway, despite the bluster, the event went forward as planned, some great art was made, and no vandalism associated with event occurred.

Cool Justin Herman Plaza Graffiti Fact: In 1987, rock legend U2 staged an impromptu concert in this very same Justin Herman Plaza, with 20,000 people in attendance. At a climactic moment in the show, Bono climbed the girder-like interior of the Plaza's Vallancourt Fountain with a can of Krylon, and sprayed the words "Stop the traffic—rock 'n' roll" all over the renowned structure. Thanks in part to the outrage that this action caused, the city of San Francisco has been waging a lengthy, expensive (like, $10 million a year expensive), all-out war against graffiti vandalism ever since. So Segpa was very, very careful to keep this art confined to canvases, where it belongs.

Mayor Wants Graffiti Contest Rubbed Out

Art competition clashes with S.F. cleanup effort

By Edward Rytkevic
Oscarwin@sfchron.com

An angry and emboldened Mayor Willie Brown, who has vowed an increased program to rub out graffiti in San Francisco, had yesterday to get Segpa's America to cancel its "Graffiti is Art" contest so he held in the city on Saturday. San Francisco's Mayor might be Brown's administration was a little bit of a problem for the mayor's office to take place on city property at Justin Herman Plaza, it said that occur at city-owned buildings, will be working at increasing graffiti just a few blocks away. It's probably too late to stop this, but we're going to press them to take this promotion out of San Francisco. Brown press secretary P.J. Johnson said the said Segpa was sending the wrong message — that San Francisco tolerates graffiti. The city estimates that it spends more than $10 million a year removing graffiti from public and private property and is stepping up its efforts. The police have already removed a citywide graffiti removal.

• CONTEXT: Page A7F Oct. 6

TIME TO SETTLE THE SCORE ONCE AND FOR ALL. FREE

Two monster corporations at war. One solution.

A massive martial arts event, Millennium Fight 2000, is organized to settle the score and eliminate all conflict between the two parties. Many of the world's most famous warriors have joined and the public is going mad with anticipation. Join over 25 brawlers from Capcom's legendary Street Fighter and SNK's world-renowned King of Fighters series* as they fight for universal domination.

Capcom vs. SNK...the ultimate collision of strength and power.

CAPCOM
CAPCOM.COM

Dreamcast.

*CAPCOM CO., LTD. BUA CAPCOM U.S.A., INC. 2000. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. ©SNK 2000. CAPCOM and the CAPCOM logo are registered trademarks of CAPCOM CO., LTD. CAPCOM VS. SNK MILLENNIUM FIGHT 2000 is manufactured and distributed by CAPCOM CO., LTD. under license from SNK Corporation. SNK is a trademark of SNK Corporation. Sega, Dreamcast and the Dreamcast logo are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Sega Enterprises, Ltd. The string logo is a registered trademark of the Interactive Digital Software Association.

EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW

One Moore Time

The State of Dreamcast in the new millennium

As the year draws to a close, we sat down with Sega of America head honcho Peter Moore to set the record straight on Dreamcast's past, present and prospects...

So: How's Dreamcast?

Fantastic! We've been doing very well since the price drop to $149. PC Data is showing a 156% increase in sales, and we've got anecdotal reports in from retailers that we had very strong sales yesterday [October 26, the day of the PS2 launch]. Possibly people disappointed by the lack of available PS2s saw that it wasn't such a big deal anyway, and picked up a DC and some games.

Sega of Japan just announced a pretty significant loss. Should gamers be worried?

No, not at all. That's what happens when you have to install a base, and dropping the price here and in Europe didn't help. [A console's life span goes in] a 5 year cycle, and the first two years are pretty ugly—but then the tie ratio of software to hardware starts going up, and you start making more money. Also, this is a half-year result, remember, coming out before the holiday sales season—which is when we expect significant software sales. This is where the margin is, and [the loss statement] also includes significant earth; and we're always looking for other ways to utilize it. PDAs are obviously the next wave—Handspring has a 16bit color screen now—and it's getting to the point where we could see getting our Genesis content on there. Yuji Naka was here yesterday showing that Fantasy Star Online, and that's going to be great: a global, online RPG. That's what we're focusing on.

Speaking on online, how's SegaNet doing? You just announced that you'd signed up 100,000 members already. It's a little ahead of our projections, actually. And that announcement

"We're confident on hardware, and on software, we're even more confident... just look at our lineup. At this point, it's in the hands of god and the consumer—and the consumer is god!"

How confident are you about DC's future going into 2001?

On a hardware front, we're incredibly confident we'll meet our target of having an installed base in North America of 4.5 million to 5 million units by the end of our fiscal year [at the end of March]. If you look at the software coming out in the next three weeks—Shenmue, Jet Grind, NBA 2K1 and Quake—and the obvious lack of any real supply of PS2s going forward, the opportunity to hit that number is very high. The sell-in and demand from stores is exceptional. So yes, we're confident on hardware; but on software, we're even more confident. Look at the blockbuster lineup we have out now—at this point, it's in the hands of god and the consumer—and the consumer is god!

capital expenditures. SegaNet doesn't happen for free. Really, though, we're investing the money to position ourselves well for 2001 and beyond.

A press release came out of Japan talking about Sega developing for other platforms. Are we going to see Sonic on PS2?

No, no. The other platforms the release talked about were things like PDAs, and the Motorola MAP phone and WAP phones in Europe. In Japan, of course, they refer to the Internet itself as a platform. But look, Sega has one of the greatest content libraries on was made prior to the release of Quake 3, which we expect will draw an entirely different gamer to online play. Also, that 100,000 number is only the people who've signed up to SegaNet. We're seeing that same number again in the NFL 2K1 chat rooms who are signing on with another ISP and having a great experience. I'll be disappointed if there aren't 4 to 5 hundred thousand people play online with Dreamcast by the end of March.

Bottom line?

Once this PS2 launch nonsense blows over, it will all come back down to what's important—which is great games. We've got them, and they don't.

Videogames go

Mindline Entertainment and Sega are in talks to bring Sega's House of the Dead series to life on the big screen, while German film production company Constantin Film is working on a big-screen version of the Resident Evil franchise. It's been confirmed that Paul Anderson has been signed to direct the movie, and that production on the film has already been started. Anderson's previous films include

Hollywood

Mortal Kombat and Event Horizon for Paramount Pictures and Soldier for Warner Brothers. The film currently has a $40 million budget and will arrive in theatres internationally in November '01. Pass the popcorn.

SEPARATED AT BIRTH

Amigo the Monkey Curious George

YOU CAN SEE THE resemblance in the smile, can't you? George W. Bush's winsome display of teeth (as pictured here) was designed by a crack team of renderers and consultants, and implemented by an even larger team of image coordinators. Samba de Amigo's delightful little monkey was produced by Sonic Team in exactly the same fashion: an odd coincidence, no? They both speak Spanish, and they both (according to reported used to like to party pretty hearty [you said "equally shots," not uh]. So, how can you tell the difference? Amigo could take George's place at a press conference and no one would even notice the difference—until, that is, he broke out the maracas and started shouting "Sambal! Sambal! Sambal!"

Still Bleeding

Rumors of Ill Bleed's death have been greatly exaggerated, say sources. Cinema Graphics shooter, published in Japan by Sega, was turned down by Sega of America—and rumors began to surface (in the lunch line, in rest-rooms, on elevators, in the corridors and in NextGen's digital chat) that the game's fate in the USA was dire.

But not so, say our deep-cover sources, speaking strictly on condition of anonymity. "The game is coming out in the US, for sure!" says said oracle. Unfortunately, the ink has yet to dry on the contract, so we can't reveal who the publisher is. Look for it next spring.

DREAM ON

GAMES WE WISH WERE ON DC

WONDER BOY Sega 1386 (MASTER SYSTEM)

Side-scrolling action RPG antics with princesses, super-deformed heroes and an awfully tough boss (let's even get us started on the ten-headed last boss in WB's Monster World on Genesis) add magic to the wondrous Wonder Boy series that showed up first in 1986 on the Sega Master System and continued in 14 different forms produced until 1994. Bring it back, please!

SEQUEL IN THE MAKING

And Yu said, Let there be 'Mue 2!

Yu Suzuki created a brave new world with Shenmue: will Chapter 2 be even braver?

QUESTION: WHAT'S COOLER THAN ANYTHING and sailing Stateside very, very soon?

Shenmue 2. Really. Yes way.

Yu Suzuki and his team have fired up their fantastic RPG machine, and they're steaming ahead on the next chapter of your favorite epic story. Here's what we already know: First, as Yu Suzuki has said, the sequel will come out much sooner than 3+ years from now (which is comparable to how long Shenmue was in development). In fact, the game will definitely be out in 2001—this was the number one item on the agenda when Sega of America boss Peter Moore went to Japan to discuss the 2001 release schedule, according to our sources.

Second, the new chapter is actually located in China, rather than Japan—y'see, the entire four-disc first game (see our 10/10 review in ODCM #08) was just the prolog.

And finally, the game itself is supposed to feature a massive graphical update. Frankly, given the heauty of the first game, we don't really see how that's possible, but a source told us that "if Shenmue is Virtua Fighter, Shenmue 2 is Virtua Fighter 2 in terms of graphics." One word, if this is true: Wow.

Plot-wise, the game will be a continuation of Ryu's quest to discover who murdered his father. What we don't know, and probably won't until the game is out, is just how close he will come to solving the mystery in Shenmue 2.

Not only does the game have 16 chapters, but a single game has multiple chapters: these quests could take virtually forever.

And we hope they do—count on us to keep you posted on new information as we hear it.

HOT LIST

WE DIDN'T START THE FIRE ...

- We want it badly:
1. Phantasy Star Online
 2. Guilty Gear X
 3. Valkyrie Profile
 4. Jumbo Safari
 5. A break

- You want it badly:
1. Phantasy Star Online
 2. Dragonball Z
 3. More Dragonball Z
 4. Shenmue 2
 5. Bleem!

- We all hope & pray for:
1. Soul Calibur 2
 2. Nights 2
 3. Panzer Dragoon Saga 2
 4. Chakan the Foreverman
 5. Eternal Champions

- You're dying to play with:
1. The MP3 player
 2. The mouse
 3. The zip drive
 4. The DVD
 5. Bleem/cast

TOP TEN

BEST SELLING TITLES, OCT. 2000

- | | |
|----------------------------------|------------|
| 1 SEGA SPORTS NFL2K1 | SEGA |
| 2 ULTIMATE FIGHTING CHAMPIONSHIP | CRABE |
| 3 SONIC ADVENTURE | SEGA |
| 4 NFL2K | SEGA |
| 5 STREET FIGHTER III: 3RD STRIKE | CAPCOM |
| 6 VIRTUA TENNIS | SEGA |
| 7 NBA2K | SEGA |
| 8 POWER STONE 2 | CAPCOM |
| 9 SEGA GT | SEGA |
| 10 TONY HAWK'S PRO SKATER | ACTIVISION |

Rock Your Gaming World with Explosive Sound!

Radical Sound Enhancement for Any Video Game Console

You thought your games sounded great before, wait until you hear them WOWed...

Instantly add more BASS and EXPLOSIVE SOUND to your video games

■ Immerse yourself in radically fuller, richer sound

■ You'll hear more BASS and AWESOME SOUND for superlative game play!

■ Adds headphone capabilities to video game consoles

WOW Thing for Game Consoles is plug-and-play and ready to use with any video game console system. So turn on the WOW Thing for Game Consoles and take your gaming experience to a whole new level!

Hear the WOW difference...
Visit www.wowthing.com

Available at a store near you, www.wowthing.com,
or call 1-800-656-5426

SRS
by SRS, Inc.
www.srslabs.com

TruBass
by SRS, Inc.

WOW
by SRS, Inc.

SILENT SCOPE

SILENT SCOPE IS NOW AVAILABLE FOR PLAYSTATION 2 AND DREAMCAST, COMPLETE WITH AN ON-SCREEN TARGETING SYSTEM, MAGNIFIABLE SCOPE, MULTIPLE BRANCHING PATHS AND DETAILED GRAPHICS DRAWN STRAIGHT FROM THE ARCADE ORIGINAL. AND YES, THE PRESIDENT IS STILL BEING HELD HOSTAGE. YOU'RE THE SNIPER WHO'S SENT TO SAVE HIM. ALL YOU'LL NEED IS A STEADY HAND, A GOOD EYE, AND AN IRON STOMACH.

PlayStation.2

 Dreamcast

Konami® is a registered trademark of Konami Corporation and Sega is a trademark of Sega Enterprises, Ltd. Play Station and the "PS" Family logo are registered trademarks of Sony Computer Entertainment Inc. Sega, Dreamcast, and the Dreamcast logo are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Sega Enterprises Ltd. The ratings icon is a registered trademark of the Interactive Digital Software Association. ©2000 Konami of America, Inc. All rights reserved.

Conspiracy Entertainment's upcoming Record of Lodoss War RPG should appease US anime fans who adored the classic series in video form.

FYI NEWS FEED

> DELAY: Unreal delayed until Jan.

> REPORT WATCH: Following its price cut to $3.49 and $3.50 ISP rebates, Sega Dreamcast sales increased 156.5 percent between July 23 and Sept. 23. PC Data revealed. In the five weeks since the price reduction, Sega's share of the market has increased to 29.9 percent of all unit sales and 29.7 percent of revenue. Sony's share has also increased to 49.9 percent in unit sales and 42.3 percent in revenue. The Nintendo 64 saw its share decline to 20.8 percent and 17.9 percent for unit sales and revenue respectively. Through the first three weeks of September, Sega moved up to claim the top position among sports publishers, while placing second overall behind Nintendo. According to PC Data, NFL 2K1 for Dreamcast is the top-selling title of the month so far.

> RELEASE UPDATES: Sammy has announced that December 7th will mark the official release date of the Dreamcast version of Gulley Gear X.

> RUMOR: Sega plans to release a 3D Expansion Card for DC, which would upgrade the system to the equivalent of a Naomi 2 board, so that the Naomi 2 arcade titles can be ported perfectly. The Naomi 2 is reported to have four times the power of the existing Naomi/Dreamcast hardware. Sega HQ denies these rumblings.

> RELEASE UPDATES: Media Factory announced a new DC real-time war sim called Alexander: The Road to Persia, to be released in Spring 2001 in Japan. Players control King Alexander and his troops, and battle rivals to expand the kingdom.

> RELEASE UPDATES: Media Factory will also release Caldecept II in Japan this winter. A sequel to the popular PlayStation card battle/table game, it requires you to roll dice to move characters and pick cards to summon monsters.

> RELEASE UPDATES: Sega says that its new Dreamcast 4M Memory Card will have 800 blocks/4MB of memory (four times the current VMU), separated into four banks of 200 blocks each.

> RELEASE UPDATES: Generation X will be porting Nine Lives/Galeax's popular Princess Maker series to Dreamcast/Japan. The DC version, Princess Maker Collection, will be a compilation of PM 1 and 2, and is scheduled to release in Japan on Jan. 25. A non-interactive demo of PM IV will be included with the game.

JAPANESE IMPORT WATCH

Dreamcast East

Anime license kicks into high gear on Dreamcast

As one of the last bastions of Japanese gaming to consistently elude the US market (besides girlfriend sims, of course), titles based on anime licenses rarely manage to survive the trip across the pond to the West. Blue Submarine No. 6, the quirky photo-sim Card Captor Sakura and

Cardice is following in the footsteps of Gundam: Side Story 0079's all the way to the US: courtesy of newly formed DC publisher, Conspiracy Entertainment. Scheduled for a December release, the game remains fairly faithful to the original Lodoss War anime series—with the heroic swordsmen

It gives us great pleasure to announce that the Diablo-esque action RPG, Record of Lodoss War, is actually coming to America...

Wow's quiz-tastic Ahh Megamisama! are just a few that will likely give us a miss.

But we have this to say to anime fans in the US: don't lose hope! It gives us great pleasure to announce that ESP and Neverland's Diablo-esque action RPG, Record of Lodoss War: Advent of Pann, as well as his love interest (the forest elf, Deedlit) on the character roster. The game, itself, features realtime battles between up to four players and various beasts and monsters, and massive dungeons just ripe for the crawling. We hope that this is the first indication of a trend in the making!

Oh My Goddess' fans (who can read Japanese) will want to keep an eye on Ahh Megamisama!

It's successful on US TV, but chances for a US conversion of Card Captor Sakura's game are slim.

Macross: another anime title stuck in Japan

DREAMCAST WITH BIZKITS AND GRAVY

SegaNet Says: This Bizkit Ain't Limp!

SegaNet takes its show on the road with the band

"If you get your ass kicked, it's probably me on the other end of the line," says SegaNet member Fred Durst. Durst originally gained notoriety (and adulation) as the frontman of Limp Bizkit, and now he's staking out new territory in the public domain as one of Dreamcast's premier online hellraisers.

As if? you say? Well, Durst and the band are ready to prove their Dreamcast prowess to all of you doubting Thomases (and doubting others, as well), in online tournaments to be held at Limp Bizkit concerts in 45 cities nationwide. These combat zones are an integral part of the band's SegaNet-sponsored tour for its band strutting its proverbial stuff, but will get to throw down on Dreamcast's Ultimate Fighting Championships against one of the musicians. The best part—or the worst, if you suck—is that these "Rumbles with a Rockstar" will be projected on the giant stage screen, in front of thousands of screaming concert-goers. And even if you don't get to go head-to-head with Fred Durst, you can visit Sega's on-site Mobile Assault Tour (MAT) trucks, which are guaranteed to be stocked with games like NFL2K1, WSB2K1, Space Channel 5 and Metropolis Street Racer.

This total sensory assault could be heading your way, soon—at print time, only dates through new album, Chocolate Starfish and the Hotdog Flavored Water.

"If you get your ass kicked, it's probably me on the other end of the line," says SegaNet member Fred Durst.

One ticket buys two joys: lucky fans (picked by local radio stations) will not only get to see their favorite

November 21 were confirmed. Just log onto SegaNet for updated tour details.

Fred Durst puts his official stamp of approval on his system of choice: Dreamcast.

THE LAST QUARTER: A 25 year history of videogames

WE'RE ALL ABOUT HISTORY HERE AT ODCM. So we were wicked excited to hear about Steven L. Kent's new book, which charts videogames from their earliest beginnings all the way up to (and including) our favorite system of today, the Dreamcast.

Kent, a columnist for our sister pub, Next Gen, is a major game historian, and it shows in this 400+ page definitive look at the birth and growth of the game industry.

This isn't a textbook, though—Kent makes a serious effort to bring the history to life with hundreds of quotes from hundreds of key figures in the game industry—including David Rosen, the founder of Sega, Yuji Naka, Yu Suzuki, and about 400 others. It does sometimes get a little dry, and there's too much focus on Nintendo for our Sega-flavored tastes, but if you're at all interested in gaming, it never gets boring.

Want to stuff your own stocking? The book is available (for now) exclusively on Amazon.com, and you can find more info by heading over to Steve's descriptive webpage at <http://members.aol.com/stevenkent>.

DREAMCAST
ENFORCER

FEEL IT FOR YOURSELF

POWERED BY:

TOPMAX
THE TOP CHOICE IN GAMING

FIND THE STORE NEAREST YOU BY GOING TO WWW.TOPMAXGAMES.COM

DOMINATOR
PLAYSTATION

WE'RE GIVING IT AWAY

Who's your Amigo?

Wanna win a monkey barrel full of goodies from Sega? Read on...

SEGA OF AMERICA DREAMCAST INC. AND THE OFFICIAL Dreamcast Magazine invite you (yes, you!) to shake things up—on our exclusive, maraca-riffic “Who’s Your Amigo?” Contest (which was originally titled the “Touch Our Monkey” Contest, until good taste prevailed). Three lucky entries will win a full Samba de Amigo set-up, including a copy of the game and the requisite maracas, and seven other Samba-lovers will score a copy of the game and some seriously cool Samba goodies. Do we even need to tell you that these babies are being released in very limited numbers? So you’ll be among the few, the proud, the Samba-tastic to have a set of maracas and a copy of the game to call your very own.

Win a full Samba de Amigo set-up, including a copy of the game and the requisite maracas.

Just send a standard-sized postcard with your name and address on it to the address shown below by March 1, 2001.

We’ll collect them and draw the winners out of a giant sombrero (as modeled above by ODCM’s own Associate Editor, Evan Shamoon). Now, who’s your amigo? Well, of course... we are!

ATTN: ODCM Samba Contest
P.O. Box 7639
San Francisco, CA 94120-7639

Maracas are DEFINITELY our favorite things to shake in Samba (besides our boogie). Sure, you can use a controller, but...

Okay, kds. How hard can it be to send us a postcard? Especially when the return on this tiny investment is as downright HUGE. If you win this contest, you’ll get everything in Samba hell the monkey. And who needs monkeys, when you’ve got us?

ELIGIBILITY: Sweepstakes open only to residents of the U.S. only. Employees of Sega of America, Imagin Media (Sponsors), its affiliates, subsidiaries, advertising and promotion agencies, service providers, and the same individuals and families of each are not eligible and where prohibited by law. By participating in this promotion, entrant agrees to abide by and be bound by these Official Rules and the decisions of the judges.

GENERAL: All federal, state, provincial and local laws and regulations apply. Potential winners must respond to any request of Federal or Copyright Clearance of liability form within 14 days of interrupted delivery of prize. Noncompliance within this time period will result in disqualification and forfeiture of prize. Prizes will be awarded by first prize certificate after March 31, 2001. No substitution or transfer of prize permitted unless prize is generally unavailable at awarding time, in which case a prize of comparable or greater value will be substituted. All federal, state and local laws are the sole responsibility of winner. Acceptance of prize effect constitutes permission to use winner’s name for advertising/promotional purposes without further compensation, unless prohibited by law. All winners must be received no later than March 31, 2001, with the winners being announced on or around April 1, 2001. The drawing will be held by Sega of America. Entries will be. By entering this contest, you agree that the Official Sega Dreamcast Magazine, Imagin Media and the other contest sponsors may use your name and information for promotional purposes without further payment. All prizes will be awarded and no minimum number of entries is required. Prizes won by minors will be awarded to their parents or legal guardians. Imagin Media is not responsible for omissions or expenses that the winners might incur as a result of receipt of the prize, and winners are responsible for estate taxes based on the value of the prize received. A list of winners may also be obtained by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to P.O. Box 7639, San Francisco, CA 94120-7639. This contest is limited to residents of the United States. No purchase necessary; void in Alaska, Maryland, Minnesota, Puerto Rico, and where prohibited by law.

your world
your games
at ebworld.com

SPREAD THE WORD

eb world . com
electronics boutique®

AOL KEYWORD: EBWORLD

DRIVER A

- Greets colleagues with a firm self-confident handshake.
- Dated cheerleaders in high school.
- Has lipstick on underwear.
- Smokes after sex.

Welcome to Metropolis Street Racer where going fast isn't enough - you've gotta go fast and look good. MSR is the only racing game where you're judged on Kudos points based on style as well as speed. MSR also features amazing recreations of real cities - London, Tokyo, and San Francisco, are shown in incredible detail, right down to the street signs and radio stations. So check out Metropolis Street Racer and see if you've got what it takes to maintain an image at 180 mph.

- Offers a limp and clammy handshake that screams of self doubt.
- Wasn't allowed to date in high school.
- Has superheroes on underwear.
- Apologizes after sex.

sega.com/msr

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (AP) —

- 2 - SAN FRANCISCO 4.5.1961

4. 11. 2004

10

1

1

1

Yes, you can change your reputation.

VYSE
UNHOLD

You're Ysye, a Blue Rogue pirate. And a well-known ninky. Which sucks. So sail the vast 3D sky in your killer airship. Discover uncharted floating islands. Fight evil pirates. With 70 weapons and 36 magic skills, you'll kick ass by the boatload. You'll be captain of your own ship with 22 crew members. You'll conquer the enemy nation. Then everyone will respect you. And they'll call you Ysye the Legend. Which rocks. Unless you don't fight. Then you're just a wuss.

VYSE THE LEGEND

sega.com

SEGA is registered in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. SEGA, Dreamcast, the Dreamcast logo, and SEGA's CP ANIMAL are registered trademarks or trademarks of SEGA Corporation or its affiliates. SEGA CORPORATION ©2000. All Rights Reserved. Game name: SEGA. 2000 - SEGA. CONSTRUCTIVE, INC. - 2000. www.sega.com

BEST STUFF EVER! 'TIS THE SEASON TO cover story

Haul in dream

People say it's better to give than to receive. These people are generally idiots. The only kind of giving we enjoy consists of handing out itemized lists of presents we want to receive for the holidays. These are the games you absolutely, positively, without a doubt must have. So stop being naughty and start being nice, lest you end up with a stocking stuffed with coal and seven copies of Soul Fighter ...

BE GREEDY: THE ULTIMATE DC WISHLIST

ing
the cast goodies

Fighting Games

NICE LIST

Soul Calibur

Soul Calibur, with its flawless graphics and sharp fighting engine, stands as the Queen Mum of all 3D brawlers. Combat pits two gorgeous weapon-wielding warriors against each other in a spectacular ballet of move and countermove that can only end with hurt feelings and the desire to play one more round—or a thousand.

Dead or Alive 2

Although it's not as deep (there, we said it) as Soul Calibur, Dead or Alive 2 features some of the most spectacular 3D fighters ever to grace a videogame, plus gorgeous environments that play an active part in every tussle. DOA 2 supports up to four players, and is a superb party game.

Street Fighter 3: Third Strike

At the top of the 2D heap, Third Strike is the best version of the best game—arguably—ever created (we believe this took place on the so-called "seventh day"). Arcade-perfect in every way, it's as good as it gets for Street Fighter fans. This is a whole new breed of polygonal fighting; you must own a 2D fighting game.

Ultimate Fighting Championship

Fist meets face repeatedly in this no-holds-barred fighter. Players step into the role of a UFC brawler and compete in an eight-sided steel cage called the Octagon. Battles are, to steal from ODCM pet philosopher John Hobbes, "naughty, brutish, and short"—fighters can try to knock each other out with fierce attacks, or perform a tortuous hold painful enough to make opponents cry "Uncle!" and "Mommmy!"

Power Stone

Easily one of the most overlooked videogames of all time, the original Power Stone stands alone for its capacity to plumb the depths of 3D play. Fighters can go virtually anywhere and pick up virtually anything—and then throw it at opponents. Crazy-non-stop-intense peed action: if you've beaten the big boys, try beating this game.

NAUGHTY LIST

Mortal Kombat Gold

Refreshed gore from the days of yore, MK Gold doesn't hold a candle to the fine fighting lineup on Dreamcast. Until the MK franchise does some reinvigorating, only hardcore fans will find any goodness here. Keep away from eyes: in case of contact, flush inflamed areas with warm water.

Weird and Wacky Games

Tired of the same ol'-same ol' fighters or sports games? Need to add a little weirdness to your gaming life?

SAMBA DE AMIGO

The premier Dreamcast party game, it's frantic action coupled with an excellent soundtrack: videogame crack. Bouncing blue dots show a player what height and what time to shake the maracas. Rattle well, and you're rewarded. Rattle poorly, and you'll make the monkey cry.

COASTER WORKS

Build a coaster and the joyriders will come. A modest hit in its homeland of Japan, Xicat hopes that gamers on the global scale will get an even bigger rush from this chance to build a better coaster from scratch...and to ride out the kinks, all the way to glory. You'll have to work out the physics and the construction, but it's cool, addictive and padded with a no-vomit policy.

PRINCESS MAKER COLLECTION

Okay, technically this game has about a snowball's chance in hell of releasing in the U.S., but it still makes our list. It's one of those creepy, slim games in which you're a Daddy who adopts the daughter he's always longed for: and now he's set with the task of raising her to legal age. Mold her into a princess—or the leading lady of evil.

SEAMAN

Coupled with a microphone for voice interaction, Seaman the misanthropic fishman is a niche gamer's dream. Raise him from egg-hood teach him life, love and sundry things while he insults you and probes your personal life. A disturbing gem, but a gem nonetheless. If Woody Allen was reading this feature—and we assume he is—Woody, you'll LOVE it.

SEVENTH CROSS: EVOLUTION

Level up from a mere amoeba to an evolved killing machine... It's either the strangest game over or life as we know it. Simple, odd and somewhat engrossing, sim fans may want to give Seventh Cross a second look. Warning: don't look too closely.

Santa's Bag of Swag SONIC PLUSH TOYS

COMPANY: SEGA
PRICE: $13 each

Sega.com has had everyone's favorite hedgehog and four of his friends done up in delicious high-quality felt. These huggable toys are built to last, and they won't break the proverbial bank—or your teeth, if you're inclined to chew on them.

Action

NICE LIST

Crazy Taxi

Insanity and genius often go hand in hand. This is certainly true for the comic book sim Crazy Taxi. Players step into the role of a devil-may-care San Francisco cabbie and ferry a zoo of colorful passengers to and fro. Taxi is the perfect game for those who want to be solidly entertained for short periods of time. Like us. Or a kitten with thumbs.

MDK2

A third-person perspective 3D shooter, MDK2 serves up plenty of murder, death, and killing (a.k.a., murder). Players control janitor-turned-hero Kurt Hectic, the eccentric Dr. Hawkins, and the gruff mech mutt Max as they plow their way through eye-popping worlds, shooting endless hordes of scum-sucking alien types. Tough love at its best.

Jet Grind Radio

Ultra-hip graf kids paint the town technicolor, while outsmarting local authorities. Like Scooby Doo for the new generation without the supernatural hi-jinks and with jet-powered inline skates rather than a Mystery Machine, Jet Grind Radio embodies nearly everything in gaming that we admire—including fast, responsive controls and an incredibly cool premise. Watch and learn, kids, then watch again as other companies rip off JGR's concept and play for generations of games to come.

NAUGHTY LIST

Soul Fighter

What could've happened to what could've been a rather cool arcade-style beat 'em up? Bad cameras, lousy controls and some half-baked ideas got in the way of our fun, and turned Soul Fighter into a bland exercise in mediocrity. What a shame.

"I was roused from my game with a thump"

THE NIGHT BEFORE...

'Twas the night before X-mas, and all through the house,
not a creature was stirring-- except for my mouse.

I was logged on and stalking some guy from Brazil, who had shown hours ago he was damned hard to kill.

I was s'posed to be nestled all snug in my bed,
And not playing Half Life until he was dead--
But just after midnight, with gibelets mid-Spatter,
I was roused from my game by a thump and a clatter.

"Something's up on the roof!"
I said in surprise;
I ran to the fireplace and peered up inside.
Whatever it was,
it was already stuck--
In the chimney, like some kind of slip-covered truck.

Driving Games

NICE LIST

Metropolis Street Racer

A long-awaited game on Dreamcast has finally arrived... And it turns out that Blaze Creations did indeed create one of the most spectacular racers ever. They were telling the truth! Using an innovative "Kudos" points system and shifting your beloved gray box into overdrive to handle the new demands, MSR tries plenty of cool things that other racers haven't dared. Arcade fans—check it out.

Test Drive Le Mans

Got a few hours to spare? Got, like, a whole day? Le Mans may be the best way to spend the extra time. It's shockingly good. From the same development team—Melbourne House—that created the fourth entry on this list (Looney Toons Space Race), Test Drive Le Mans not only incorporates intriguing time-dependent handling, but it's damn purty to look at as well. And yes, the 24-hour mode is for real.

SF Rush 2049

Arcade conversion done right, Midway's outrageously over-the-top racer proves that sequels don't necessarily have to be derivative. Speeding along twisty, turny tracks in a crazy tricked-out futuristic hovercar is great—now, add in loads of shortcuts and other goodies that are fast-becoming staples in the series, and you have something quite special.

Looney Toons Space Race

Easily the best of the Dreamcast "wacky racing" lot (yes, even better than Wacky Races itself), Space Race combines the best elements of WipEout and Mario Kart into one hella fun package. The graphics are wonderful...and you gotta love watching Wile E. Coyote plummet to his death over and over in real time. Forget IKEA this Christmas: go for Acme!

NAUGHTY LIST

Test Drive 6

Okay, okay. The possibility certainly exists that there are games worse than Test Drive 6. However, you are unlikely to ever come across a racing game as uninspired, flat and—dare we say it—bless as this dud. Stay far, far away.

Gen-Xmas

Ideally, a Dreamcast should be played not on an entertainment system, but in an entertainment environment called the ODCM Dream DC Setup. We've tallied up all of the elements necessary to create the perfect gaming biosphere and listed them below—so go to it, you yaks who went public this year and have money to burn!

I.T. LEVEL BUDGET

1. JVC D201 Television w/ Surround Sound ($400)
2. APEX AD500A DVD Player ($100)
3. Economy-size box Chocodiles ($30)

ENGINEER LEVEL BUDGET

1. Sony Wega 36" Flatscreen TV ($1900)
2. Sega S-Video Cables ($20)
3. RCA AV Selector ($20)
4. Monster S-Video Cables ($30)
5. Economy size bag Wasabi Peas ($40)

SALES LEVEL BUDGET

1. Princeton Arcadia 38" monitor ($2300)
2. Sega VGA Box ($50)
3. S4 Midland 8200 Speakers ($329)
4. Marantz 300-disc DVD Jukebox ($1500)
5. Economy-size box Pecan Sandies ($50)

CEO LEVEL BUDGET

1. Pioneer Pro 710 HD Model TV ($8300)
2. Speakercraft In-ceiling Subwoofer ($1800)
3. Nakamichi SoundSpace12 w/DVD
4. Economy-size box of Fran Pocky ($7700)
5. Round-trip ticket to Japan to purchase Pocky ($3500+)

Sports

NICE LIST

NFL 2K1

The taste of turf is delicious indeed. Sega improved its potent football license in every way, with ultra-realistic looking characters who breathe smoke on cold days and perform stunning dives, tackles, and leaps. The weak running game that dominated in the original has been resculpted to allow the video fullbacks and halfbacks to perform as they would in real life. And you can play it online!

Tony Hawk's Pro Skater 2

Send skateboarder Tony Hawk straight up a ramp and into a series of beautiful spins, twists, grinds and grabs, defying gravity for what seems a breathless eternity...the satisfaction cannot be captured in the confines of a mere sentence. Videogame nirvana.

Virtua Tennis

Under normal circumstances, the only thing less interesting than real tennis would be Virtua Tennis—but VT gets ODCM's nod as Most Addictive Game Ever. With these superb graphics and an equally excellent control system, up to four people can storm the court and lose hours, days and weeks.

NBA 2K1

The only facet of modern basketball not included in NBA 2K1 is the face of now-retired basketball star Michael Jordan, hawking Ball Park franks and everything else. A sequel to the prize-worthy NBA 2K, NBA 2K1 takes the basketball franchise online and improves it with additional character animations and a neat Franchise Mode (where you can create and manage your own team). And it's online compatible. Boo-yah.

NAUGHTY LIST

NFL Quarterback Club 2000

This oddie proved to be the furthest thing from a goodie, with stiff plays and poor animations. If you're begging for some good of QBC action, skip the bargain bin and head for the new releases.

It kicked its way downward, it gasped and wheezed; It muttered in what sounded like Japanese. It kepplopped on its backside, when finally free--

Stood up, turned around, and ran right into me.

So here we were, both of us, caught in the act. I with my Dreamcast and he with his sack.

Santa's Bag of Swag

SONIC ADVENTURE ACTION FIGURE

COMPANY: RESAURUS
PRICE: $18.00/or $6.99 each

Pette and sweet, these are the mini-action figures to beat for Sonic Adventure. Equipped with rings and other tiny goodies, not only are these guys fully poseable, but they're incredibly affordable as well.

Adventure Games

NICE LIST

Resident Evil — Code: Veronica

The ungrateful dead have returned yet again to plague heroine Claire Redfield. She's been captured and taken to a secret island where, of course, the most perfect sort of horror ensues. Capcom hits its highest note yet with this zombie epic; it is truly gorgeous and titanic in scope.

Rayman 2: The Great Escape

Never has a game been so aptly subtitled. Rayman 2 is simply a great escape—a fantastical little platformer that never forgets that games should be immersive and enjoyable. Ubi Soft has created a stunning world complete with vibrant colors, dancing clouds, dank swamps, and bubbling lava for the lovable little moppet Rayman to explore.

Shenmue: Chapter 1 — Yokosuka

Yes, the man of the hour, Ryo Hazuki, can kick ass and take names. Yes, he has a repertoire of face-banging, bone-crunching martial arts techniques that would stress out even the master Bruce Lee. Yes, he's a responsible hero/family guy on a quest to avenge his father's death. But he's also a Jet Cola addict. And he collects toys and plays daddy to a kitten. And at times, he's even sensitive. Jeez, this guy must be human! And this must be one of the top adventures to date, on any system.

NAUGHTY LIST

The Ring: Terror's Realm

Or The Ring: terror's realm. It's like, scary bad. With all of the cool games in Japan that never made it across the pond to the US, why did Infogrames pick up this little monster for Stateside release? Poor presentation, bland graphics and incredibly repetitive gameplay...it's a real conundrum. Skip it unless you like the smell of burning dollars.

"I don't fill your stocking if you don't count sheep."

RESIDENT EVIL: CODE VERONICA

SHENMUE: CHAPTER 1 — YOKOSUKA

DC Y2K: ALL DREAMCAST, ALL THE TIME

January

The three-month-old Dreamcast is a walkin', talkin' genius! Shenmue releases in Japan; saliva releases in the US.

May

Sega's line-up and booth BESTROY the competition. Over 120 new games are shown, with another 100+ announced. The games are so good, we almost forget to watch the booth babes. Almost.

September

SegaNet! At last! Evan plays NFL 2K1 and quickly racks up an unbelievable 1 and 41 record. Ouch! His one victory was a "mercy game" thrown by an eight-year-old in Scranton, PA.

February

Marine Fishing and other titles released at the arcade show (ADU2000) in Tokyo get an overwhelming response from fans. One guy turns into a fish to show his support.

June

Utah, fresh from taking over E3, dances her way into our hearts. In Japan, gamers stop Left Right Left Right Sit! Sit! Sitting long enough to pick up Jet Set Radio.

October

While the PS2 fanboys wait in line, DC owners relax online with Quake III, NBA 2K1 and Topopoli Street Racer. Chris has a one (whole) night stand with Test Drive Le Mans and falls in love.

March

In springtime a young gamer's fancy turns to love, and did we ever love March! With the debuts of Code: Veronica, ODA 2 and MDK 2, it was a game-smashing dream.

July

Sega blows past the two million system sales mark in North America—that means Canada, too! (See, we didn't forget you were up there.)

November

Tony Hawk 2 appears. Evan disappears. If you see him (or our copy of the game), tell him to send a postcard. And we want our GOROM back.

April

Poo Chi! arrives in the office. For three weeks, we try to teach him to fetch. Then we go back to using Evan to bring us stuff.

August

Grandia II releases in Japan and tops the charts. Hope heats up for the US release; our preview is so hot it burns our fingers ("Fean, what do we do with these oven mitts? Yeeoww! Oh.")

December

Dreamcast's Santa-sans gives up the goods for all of us! Catch 'em all in 2001—we'll be the ones playing Phantasy Star Online.

Santa's Bag of Swag

11" TALL SONIC
THE HEDGEHOG

COMPANY: RESAURUS
PRICE: $19.99

Remember this guy from way back in ODCM issue 06? While we have yet to find this possible, hard plastic Sonic doll in any horror movies, we are currently shopping the idea around to film studios. A cool gift, nonetheless.

RPG

"I had to think fast. I had to be clever—I had to keep Santa from leaving forever."

NICE LIST

Skies of Arcadia

The sky, thankfully, is not the limit here. Sega's new RPG strikes a roguish pose with a swashbuckling pirate named Vyse, whose heart of gold will melt the hearts of every steely-eyed gamer—even yours. Set in a series of floating islands, Skies is epic in scope and packed with soads of things to do and discover. If this game was any bigger, it would have to get its own zipcode. Only drawback? You might forget to eat. Or sleep...

Grandia II

When asked to sum up Grandia II's great appeal, an Ubi Soft representative stated simply that "200 people + 2.5 years of total dedication = awesome gaming experience." Every facet of this game seems to reek of someone's hard work, from the 3D characters who exhibit more facial expressions than most Hollywood actors to the game's lovely, crackling campfire flames. In a word: Sweet! A deserving sequel to the classic original on Saturn.

NAUGHTY LIST

Is there a bad RPG on Dreamcast? Well...no. Not really. A dearth of roleplaying games developed for the system has left us pinning for new titles—and whenever they appear, in whatever guise, they're a welcome oasis. Really, though, the very worst DC RPGs are only mediocre (Time Slayers, EGG) or simplistic (Evolution) rather than truly tragic. Heck, bring 'em all on. Please, Sega?

"You're Santa!" I shouted. "Hand over the loot!"

Yep. That's what it said.

"You're Santa!" I shouted. "Hand over the loot! New Dreamcast games, joysticks and lightguns to boot!"

But Santa-san shook his head (albeit sadly).

Regrettably, sir, you're behaving quite badly.

You're still playing Dreamcast; you should be asleep--

I don't fill your stocking if you don't count sheep."

Konnichi-wow!

While the US does get some neat Sega goodies, there's no question that if the US and Japan had an armwrestling match over who got the coolest swag, the US would be totting its sprained wrist to the ER in about two seconds flat. Shenmue cell phone straps and hot pink Sakura Taisen Dreamcasts—ouch! And our pleasant stuffed animals are nothing compared to the horrifically cute totebags produced by the Japanese videogame merchandising machine. Oh, how we wish these little guys would creep beneath the ODCM tree this year!

Kyaro Inflatable Toy

Ours was a freebie handed out at the Spring Tokyo Game Show, but Japanese gamers can buy and cuddle up with Grandia II's sadistically cute mascot, Kyaro (Carro in the US). It's wearable, as well! Kawaii!

Sonic Jelly Keychains

Color-coordinated for the new generation, these keychains are not only cheap but hip (come on, aren't they?). We stumbled across these goodies on a trip to Japanese superstore Tokyo Joypolis (known to gamers as Buy-opolis).

Sakura Taisen Art Books

Who said that all of those wacky Sakura Taisen fans loved the games for their gameplay? Well, actually a lot of them do, but an equal amount love the artwork of the numerous lovely fighting ladies. And where better to check out the gals of the Sakura games than the official art books?

Eternal Arcadia Limited Box-set

The term "jackpot" only bigger would describe the Special Edition boxed set of Sega's uber RPG, Eternal Arcadia (Silks of Arcadia in the US). Sniff. Who wants to bet we won't see Cupid keychains or a nifty art book arriving in a (signed) box with our US version?

"If I win, you leave all of Dreamcast's top games."

A timeless legend. An epic adventure. Record Of LODOSS War

 Dreamcast™

"Record Of Lodoss War... will definitely satisfy Dreamcast owning Diablo fans"

- www.gamespot.com

"Record Of Lodoss War... looks and sounds brilliant on the Dreamcast"

- www.ign.com

Experience the world of Record of Lodoss War up close and personal in an epic 3D action/RPG only for Sega Dreamcast. Take control of a mysterious warrior from the past, resurrected to save the future, on a colossal quest filled with pulse pounding action and high adventure. Join forces with popular characters from the Lodoss universe and combat hundreds of vicious enemies with dozens of spectacular spells and customizable weapons.

Animated Blood
Animated Violence

Stocking Stuffers

(for really big socks)

We love our games, but we love them more when we get to play 'em as well as they can possibly be played—on great peripherals that go the distance to enhance our collective gaming experience. Dreamcast has some serious keepers in its library, courtesy of Sega and various third parties. Check 'em out, and tell the pertinent people with pockets just exactly how you'd like your stocking stuffed.

CONTROLLER PADS AND ARCADE STICKS

The Dream Pad MadCatz ($29.99)

This sharp controller sports six gameplay buttons on its face and two analog triggers underneath. It's built for comfort with rubberized palm grips—and its reasonable price is seductive.

Agetec Arcade Stick

Agetec ($49.99)

The official arcade stick of choice, it has a solid base, quality buttons and a high asking price—but if you want to get the most out of your arcade fighters, this is your answer. We all have one at home, and we didn't even get them for free.

TopMax Enforcer TopMax ($29.99)

Cheaper, but design is top quality. It's a good alternative to the pricey AgeTec, but it's a little lighter in its base. If you're not looking for the steel-heavy feel in your stick, then you won't be disappointed.

VMUs AND MEMORY CARDS

Sega Official VMU Sega ($24.99)

Available in all flavors of the rainbow (except for pina colada), Sega's own VMU is still the best choice for DC gamers. The only drawback is the fact that the battery is quickly eaten up with regular use. But at least you'll never have to deal with corrupted data again.

Tremor Pak Plus

Interact ($19.99)

All the rumbling and saving (with 200 blocks) you need in one handy package. That's a whole lotta goodness, but you won't have a LCD screen for VMU mini-games. Keep in mind that it's an unofficial peripheral, and might not work with all DC games.

One Lump of Coal or Two?

A fortune cookie once said that those who forget the past are doomed to repeat it. So we're going to remind you of a couple of system stinkers that we NEVER want to see again, in any guise, in any format. Even cel-shaded. These are the games we'd wish on our worst enemies, if we had any enemies bad enough to call "worst."

SONIC SCHOOLHOUSE

• PC, 1996, SEGA

Who's idea was it to turn Sonic into "America's favorite family character" by making him teach math to kids? We don't know, but we're fairly sure they no longer work in games. Or math.

MR. BONES

• SATURN, 1996, ZONO, INC

Zono, Inc.'s secret recipe for Mr. Bones was simple: one steam engine with cowcatcher and one cow. This trainwreck featured the music of the Bygone Dogs played by skeletons. Noooo...

NIGHT TRAP

• SEGA CD, 1992, DIGITAL PICTURES

Dana Plato in jerky 160 x 120, 52-color video. It wasn't just sensors who found this offensive. FMV. Be afraid. Be very afraid.

KOLIBRI

• SEGA 32X, SEGA

A hummingbird. Who shoots from his beak. Okay, sure. This ill-defined shooter defined the target market for 32X. I.e., none at all.

MAKE YOUR OWN MUSIC VIDEO W/ C&C MUSIC FACTORY

• SEGA CD, 1992

"Gonna make you sweat." Gonna wear deodorant.

X-PERTS

• GENESIS, 1995, DEEP WATER

One of the last nails in Genesis's coffin. This title was so insipid that Sega didn't even send out review copies to the press. This is the equivalent of Mom not sending your Sears portraits to Grandma. Poor, tuggly little game.

Santa's Bag of Swag

SPACE CHANNEL 5 MINI-LUNCHBOX

COMPANY: PALISADES MKTO
PRICE: $5-6

Just the right size for packing away DC games or system cables, these mini-collectibles are tiny, but they're simply must-haves at their very low asking price. Look for 'em in a videogame store near you.

MORE PERIPHERALS

Dream Connection 3-in-1 Level Six ($27.95)

Imagine being able to toot around on your Dreamcast with any sort of peripheral, from PlayStation controllers to PC keyboards to Sega Saturn steering wheels. It's a dream come true, and it's readily available from Level Six. A mini-device with a separate power supply, you simply hook it to your DC, then hook in your peripheral of choice through the Dream Connection. Voila!

Rumble Rod MacCatz ($29.99)

If you can't get your hands on the official fishing reel controller from Sega, MacCatz has a grand alternative in its authentically modeled Rumble Rod. It conveys all of the vibrational oddities of Sega's two stellar fishing titles—if you can find it. It's hot.

Cha Cha Amigo Maracas Level Six ($57.95)

The price on those official maracas a little too rich for your bargain-hunting blood? Then look no further than Level Six's unofficial maraca controller for all of your Samba needs. Level Six claims that they're more accurate than the official ones, but we have yet to see much of a difference. Of course, that's not a bad thing.

Starfire Lightblaster Interact ($29.99)

There's only one game on Dreamcast that uses the Starfire Lightblaster or any other lightgun (House of the Dead 2), but it's well worth the investment if you own the game. Face it, HOTD2 sucks without a lightgun, and Interact's well-balanced, options-heavy periph is the best choice.

Panther DC [MacCatz] ($39.99)

For the PC gamer in every Dreamcast FPS fan comes one of the coolest accessories for the system: the Panther DC. With a trackball for movement and a stick (complete with all the necessary buttons) for shooting, firing and general havoc-wreaking, this is your one stop shop/armory for upcoming games like Half-Life and Soldier of Fortune. With smooth controls, it's a great alternative to the mouse and keyboard.

DC Mouse Sega ($19.99)

The one and only mouse for Dreamcast, this is a must have for net cruisers and Quake III fans. If you already have a keyboard, so much the better—the mouse is part and parcel of the Internet experience. With two-button control along with a wheel and side button to boot, what are you waiting for? Get squeaking!

Gameshark CDX Interact ($49.99)

The standard for code junkies is now available to DC owners. Plenty of options and a weird ability to play import games—tres cool, indeed.

Compatibility issues are always a question, but we haven't had any problems with ours thus far.

MadCatz MC2 Racing Wheel MacCatz ($59.99)

We accept the MadCatz MC2 Racing Wheel as our lord and savior. The wheel and pedal combination allow for some of the most realistic racing around, and MacCatz has spared no expense with a molded wheel, pro-style shifter, and ultra-responsive foot pedals.

He was pretty damn good,
I was pretty damn better.

Took the shirt off his back, plus that natty red sweater.

He gave me the best Dreamcast stuff in his bag... Then hoisted himself to the roof

(it still sags).

Eight tiny blue hedgehogs leaped into the night, Drawing his sleigh up, up, up out of sight. I watched from the window, then curled up in bed... While visions of Dreamcast games danced in my head.

A TALE OF

TWO RPGS

It was the best of times... It was the best time ever. ODCM's Francesca Reyes weathers epic battles of Good versus Evil and pixie versus gnome in GameArts' Grandia II and Sega's Skies of Arcadia, only to find that both of these groundbreaking new RPGs are fighting to win.

Finding a Voice

One of the most praiseworthy choices made during the US localization of Grandia II was Ubisoft's decision to go with a proven, name-brand quality voice recording team. Rather than employing testers from an internal QA department or drafting handy friends to do the job (like other companies tend to do, more often than not), the company called in dialog diva Kris Zimmerman to add real talent to the task. Known for her work on Metal Gear Solid (PS), she contributes a difference you can taste. Spoken acting is the key to creating a cast of distinct personalities, and it often cults the good games from the great ones.

Environments show amazing attention to detail. Designs for all of the various townspeople, for instance, are heavily textured.

GRANDIA II

Thankfully, someone has been listening.

With the release of Overworks' Skies of Arcadia and the impending launch of Game Arts' anxiously awaited Grandia II, we're entering what can only be called an enchanted season for Dreamcast owners who like their coffee black and their games long—as in, 40-plus hours long.

While I played, I labored over deciding which of the two titles is the better (mythical) beast. And I came to the conclusion that it was impossible to find two more drastically different—yet traditional—RPGs. How different? Just read on...

Grandia

I can truthfully admit that I'm one of the chumps who never finished the original Grandia. I remember waiting patiently for its US release on Saturn, and after being disappointed, I played through more than half of the PlayStation version in earnest. But the weird translation and horrid voice acting couldn't keep me enthralled for the length of the journey—and it was a very long journey.

But I wiped the slate clean once I heard about Grandia II on Dreamcast. After all, Game Arts—the company responsible for two of Sega CD's finest moments, Lunar: The Silver Star and Lunar: Eternal Blue—had big plans, and looked ready to take its know-how into the third dimension, complete with "mature" character designs and an engrossing storyline. (Little was actually revealed about the game's plot during the time that its PR machine was churning out images of a legend in the making, other than the fact that it would be "engrossing.") But we filled in the blanks.) Needless to say, I was hooked from the word go.

Wine, Women and Song

Grandia II* takes place in a brand new world, far different from that of the original. It begins with the introduction of a mercenary-type Geohound called Ryudo. At the start of the game, he and his avian partner Skye are summoned to a small town deep in the Black Forest, to receive the orders for their next job: they must escort a young, spiritual songstress named Elena to a mysterious ceremony in a nearby tower.

From the first moment, Ryudo and Elena clash. Elena's naive, pious nature rubs Ryudo—a tough-talking, materialistic young rake—the wrong way. But after Ryudo fulfills his duty and takes Elena to the tower for her ceremony, something goes horribly wrong and the two are thrown together on the same side of a divine

When you have more than one person in your traveling party, they'll trail behind the lead character in a cool conga line. But they don't shout "Conqui! Conqui!" So stop looking for the monkey.

As per the RPG standard, this game features a diverse cast of characters that must learn to get along in order to complete their individual shopping lists of errands. The main conflict is between street-smart Ryudo and Elena, the fair maiden of Granas.

GameArts' self-proclaimed "labor of love" arrives at last on US shores, to put a new Dreamcast star on the roleplaying map struggle: between the people of Light (like Elena and fellow followers of Lord Granas, the holy deity in the world of Grandia II) and the people of Darkness (those who worship the "evil" god, Valmar, whom ancient legends peg as destroyer supreme). The conflict stems from an ancient holy war, which scarred the landscape and created the Great Rift—a gaping crevice that runs the length of the globe. It's a bottomless void, from which no one has ever emerged.

From here on out, Grandia II adheres to some of the best tried and true RPG standards in storytelling: fans know and love. Therefore, A) Every character must come to terms with something mysteriously dreadful or painful in his or her past while developing into a much more well-rounded person; B) The entity that the party initially believes to be the "root" of evil (small 'e') is in fact, just a small manifestation of Evil (capital 'E'); C) Big issues in (virtual) life are never cast in black and white; they're merely shades of pixel-pink gray.

But all RPG fans worth their salt know that even though a game may seem like a By-the-Book RPG™ at first blush, it's the way the subjects are presented that can really make it something special. After all, all books look the same; it's what's inside that counts. And for the most part, Grandia II does many of these things right.

The Text is Mightier Than the Sword

It's become ever more important in the RPG genre for US publishers to get the localization of text just right. To this end, Ubisoft deserves an A+ for effort. Every character, including Ryudo, has been given a distinct personality, each with his or her own speech patterns, mannerisms and even dialect. For instance, Mareg, boast man with a strong affinity for nature, speaks in elaborate phrases which seem more like parables than actual dialog. And Ryudo speaks his mind in the most straightforward speech possible, never mincing words and, at times, using pretty harsh language to demonstrate his point.

But for all the effort and care that's been put into Grandia II's dialog, I couldn't help but feel that once in awhile, something was very much amiss. Conversations between characters occasionally felt disjointed and awkward in their arrangements, which pulled me out of the world and put me in a critiquing sort of mood.

Imagine you're a writer who's given 100 pages of text that aren't arranged in any sort of order. Your job is simply to rewrite whatever's on the page in front of you as it appears, knowing that after you're done, someone else will come in and arrange it in sequence >>

Friend or Foe

Meet your fellow travellers! You're going to be together, hand in glove, for more than 40 hours; so you might as well start getting to know each other.

Ryudo

The motor-mouth hero with a chip on his shoulder bigger than the Shinsen Continent (you'll find out why). He's stuck on Elena, but he'd die before admitting it. Note: Great abs.

Elena

A beautiful but naive Songstress of Granas. Her pretty often gets in the way of good relations with Ryudo, but she can't help finding herself attracted to his strong persona. Note: Nice singing voice.

Millennia

A part of Darkness and servant of Valmar, she's not nearly as evil as she's often taken to be. In fact, she's fallen deeply in love with Ryudo and'll do anything to help him. Note: Bra suspended by disbelief.

Mareg

Boastman of honor who joins up with Ryudo to track down the man who nearly destroyed his entire village. He hides a heart of gold under that pelt. Note: Speaks like a Hint Stone reads in Ecco: DDTF.

Roan

A young, perky blond on a journey to learn more about the war between Granas and Valmar. Why? Well...we could tell you, but then we'd have to kill you. Note: Lollipop Lane.

Tio

An automaton who has only recently become sentient through an act of kindness by Mareg and Co. She yawns to have emotions and memories like humans do. Note: Awesome hair.

Melfice

A mysterious figure from Ryudo's and Mareg's past, Melfice is out for destruction at all costs. Why? We won't spoil it. But we can say she's a cool evil villain. Note: Great voice.

The Rift-off: Great vs. Dark

Welcome to RPG convention #172: The handy abyss "from which no one has ever returned." In Grandia II, this mythical no-man's-land is hiding out near the Great Rift, and it's called The Great Rift. Billowing fog fills a bottomless canyon that every soul avoids—except for the few who had to go in and disappear in order to make the point that no one gets out.

But look out, here comes Skies of Arcadia with a rift of its own—refusing to be left out of this battle of crevasses.

This one isn't great so much as it's dark: it's the Dark Rift, marked as a forbidding blotch on the map. It, too, is a whence from which no one has ever returned. [Yawn, cue ominous laugh.]

Is this similarity an oddity or a given? Actually, this whole Rift thing is a convention that tears up the map in most RPGs at around hour No. 30. Which of these fine specimens of Rift is more likely to inspire dread in gamers? ODCM would put money on The Dark Rift. We admit that we're still afraid of the dark.

Gameplay variety in Grandia II might not include tons of mini-games or side quests, but there's definitely a good amount of flexibility in its customization features for spells and skills.

Skies of Arcadia's Dark Rift

Grandia II's combat engine forces gamer to >> by page number. Now, imagine that the title heading all these pages is Grandia II. The end result is thorough and concise, but the lack of any real cohesion or "flow" in the text often causes the context to seem out of whack...all over so slightly. And ultimately, the characters do suffer from these visible omissions and sleights of hand.

Ain't Love Grandia?

As surprising as it may seem at the start of the game, the real crux of Grandia II isn't about the trouncing of devils by angels or dark by light. Instead, the heart of the storyline is the relationship between Ryudo and Elena—which is hopelessly complicated by the intrusion of Ryudo's second love interest, Millennia. She's a big-busted vassal of Valmar, who forcibly enters Ryudo's life near the start of the game. All three characters are so drastically different from one another that by the tenth hour of the game, you just know something's cooking. Between Ryudo's sharp tongue, Elena's goodie-two-shoes schoolgirl act and Millennia's brazen sassiness, the underlying current of tension has grown so thick by hour No. 30 that you could cut it with a dull broadsword. And, strangely enough, this is where the getting gets good. Up until this point, I found the pacing of the storyline to be a bit on the slow and steady side; but the rising heat between Ryudo and the girl's succeeds in cooking the pace into a brisk simmer almost immediately.

This "love" triangle was one of the plot lines in Grandia II that felt so genuine that I found myself blissing outwards sometimes simply to discover what happened next. In fact, I could almost do without all of the secondary subplots. Almost.

In this sense, Grandia II follows the path of similar RPGs like Final Fantasy VIII. Remember that one? Romance, relationships and a rather silly lead character (FFVIII's Squall wasn't the most considerate guy on the block) who comes off like a jerk until the bitter end, when he suddenly gets all moral and nice.

Well, Ryudo fits this bill perfectly...and his brutish behavior often leaves you wondering why Elena would be as attracted to him as she is. And though Ryudo is no squeaky clean Ryō Hazuki (Shenmue), he does develop into a kinder, gentler hero (albeit with a trucker's mouth) in the end. It's a turn-around bound to make those RPG-playing ladies swoon.

In the end, Grandia II's storytelling machine is strong enough to take you through this change of heart without embarrassing you or forcing you to smack your forehead and moan "Aaagghhhhh." The text is sometimes clumsily delivered, and it may provoke questions like "Why is he saying that?" or "What made her/him do that?" or simply "Huh?", but it's generally clever enough to convey emotional realism. Fans will be entranced—if not for the love story then for the divine conflict. Oh, and a kick-ass battle system doesn't hurt, either.

Isometric designs in this sequel are vastly improved over the original's straightforward layouts. Mazes feature interactive elements like simple puzzles, which must be solved in order to progress. There are also traps and secret passages, which combine to give a rich feel to dungeons.

use real strategy and innovation in battle. ♣

Battle Royale

Beyond its characters, the original Grandia was lauded for its superb battle system. Why? Simply because it was so unlike any other traditional RPG's combat engine: It forced gamers to use real strategy, planning and preparation. And while some of the conventions introduced in the first game have been modified for the sequel, it's still as fresh and fun as ever. Really.

First off, there are no random battles. I'll say it again: No. Random. Battles. Instead, your enemies are visible onscreen, and you'll have to sneak up on them or prevent them from sneaking up on you in order to gain advantage in battle, much as in the Evolution series.

Second, combat itself is a finely tuned machine, which uses a combination of "realtime" (I use the term loosely) and turn-based action, in that movement is dictated by a battle meter on the screen. Depending on your action (whether you're casting a difficult spell or hacking away), your character's speed on the meter will zip or crawl before the command is executed. Meanwhile, your enemies are constrained by the same clock. The meter also tells you which character an enemy plans to hit when he attacks once its action has been entered by the game—as well as its hit points and chances of dropping an item. The level of interaction and information is so amazingly thorough and complete that it gives you a great base for plotting effective counterattacks and commands.

And this brings us to the different options available in combat. You can choose to cast spells, perform combo attacks (for higher damage) or Critical hits, which will effectively cancel or counter enemy moves. The result is an addictive battle system that makes the repetitive task of fighting strange monsters an enjoyable treat. I can state with confidence that Grandia II's battle system is not only the game's strongest suit, but one of the strongest and most inventive ever designed for an RPG.

Have You Ever Been Experienced?

At the end of a battle well fought, your reward lies not only in gold or items, but in Special Coins or Magic Coins. Distributed amongst any of your party members, they'll give characters different abilities, plus the skill to power them up and make them quicker to execute. This is a massive improvement in customization over the original Grandia. Because the majority of them can be equipped, it's up to you, as to who would be the better healer or spell caster in your party. And if you think this sounds sweet, it's even sweeter in action.

If you're like me, you're a compulsive collector. You'll more than likely find yourself scrambling around forests and dungeons trying to beef up your Special and Magic Coins in order to unlock each and every spell and skill in order to see what they look like and how much damage they deal >>

Spell Trouble

With Grandia II's unique battle system, you'll need to get to know your spells and skills—they will usually dictate the tide of every fight. Some of the effects are amazingly crisp: Just try highlighting Ryudo's plethora of sword-savvy moves (Purple Lightning) or Elena's holy destruction (White Apocalypse). But the use of pre-rendered effects for some of the big spells can sometimes seem a little off-kilter when set against a fully polygonal set of characters and enemies.

In the end, the visual result falls squarely into the Love It or Hate It category. I thought that there was some unique flair added to the look of battles; giving an old-school flavor to a next-generation game. But at times, I have to admit that some of the effects were a little strange—they seemed to suffer from an odd lapse in design logic. When Millennia uses her Fallen Wings skill, for example, she is replaced by a quick 2D animated silhouette that casts the actual blow. Why? We don't know. But it's cool.

O.G. (Original Grandia)

FYI: when the original Grandia debuted on Saturn in Japan in '97, it met with overwhelming success and spawned fan discs and other related media. Encompassing the adventures of a young wannabe adventurer named Justin and his childhood friend Sue, the game spanned two discs and was subsequently ported to PlayStation in the US and Japan.

I don't care much about old sayings, but I would like you to tell us how you got to know so much about us.

Grandia II does so many things right that it's easy to overlook any minor errors. Interesting dungeon designs, good voice acting and an involving storyline will more than make up for an off-slow-paced plot and some overly basic gameplay elements. Visually, it's impressive to say the least; tongues of fire, shadows and fabrics in costumes are realistic enough to inspire awe. This truly is one of the grandest RPGs of the season on any system.

Keeping a gamer's interest after battle #2240 is quite a feat

>> In battle, Keeping the gamer's interest after battle #2240 is quite a feat for any RPG to accomplish, and Grandia II does it splendidly.

Good Looks

So what about the way it looks? Take a gander at these screenshots, and you'll see one of the best-looking new games out there—with polygonal characters strolling through completely 3D environments and tiny details in every nook and cranny rendered with complicated textures and vibrant colors. This is one of those titles that makes you wonder how long it's going to take the world at large to realize that videogames have clearly turned into an art form. The superdeformed characters are wonderfully drawn, right down to Ryudo's boot buckles and the eyelids in Millennia's icy skirt. Visually, Grandia II was clearly born into a loving family of innovative designers, whose multi-layered creation could never be realized without the power of Dreamcast.

The most amazing thing about Grandia II's graphics and character designs is how much they look like 3D representations of their 2D brethren. The cute, superdeformed figures trotting across lush, colorful fields are the closest things to angels in pixel heaven that oldskool RPG fans will ever see. And it's impressive that the highly detailed character models still retain as many animations in their 3D forms as they would have as 2D hand-drawn sprites. So dreamy! While some players may not take to Grandia II's cutesy visuals, there's no denying that this is one very beautiful game.

The Last Word?

So, should you spend the $50 or not? In a word: yes. While the storyline may seem overly straightforward and the layout of the game is, at times, too linear, Grandia II's stellar battle system, customizations and memorable cast cannot be best with any sort of stick. You'd think that with a lineup of the usual suspects in your party (swordsmen hero, healing priestess, powerful beastman, etc.), the game would quickly turn into another RPG by-the-numbers affair—but Ubisoft's efforts in the localization and voice recording department, along with Game Arts' ingenious designs, will succeed in pleasing a multitude of anxious fans. Is it worth the long wait? Definitely.

Only on Dreamcast

Dreamcast

PUBLISHER: UBI SOFT
DEVELOPER: GAME ARTS
GENRE: RPG
ONLINE PLAYERS: 1
YOU OWN IT ONLINE? NO
PRICE: $49.99

GRAPHICS 9
Consistently detailed, world-pre-rendered spell effects

SOUND 10
Characters very responsive with a brilliant battle system in place

CONTROL 9
Camera very responsive with a brilliant battle system in place

GAMEPLAY 9
Slow-building but rewarding adventure with loads of character customization and charm

Score: 9

limp bizkit

presents

chocolate starfish and the hot dog flavored water in stores now

featuring collaborations with dmx, method man, redman, xzibit & scott weiland

featuring rollin' (urban assault vehicle) produced by swizz beatz album produced by terry date and limp bizkit > additional production by josh abraham > additional production by scott weiland > mixed by andy wallace > executive producer and a&r jordan schur

©2020 Flip/Interscope Records. All rights reserved

Setting Sail

With its unique character designs, refreshingly different premise and imaginative gameplay elements, Skies of Arcadia takes roleplaying into a whole different era. Freedom to roam, along with the constant sense of discovery is reinforced by Old World nuances, giving the game a wonderful feel of departure from the norm.

As demonstrated in the screenshots below, the variety in environments is astounding in Skies of Arcadia. Every single new land that Ylze and his crew discover is staggeringly different from the last; it's always surprising that a whole GD-ROM isn't dedicated to all the different towns and dungeons. From the Western flavor of some of the smaller continents to the European accents of the Vivia capital to the Arabian-esque mystique of the desert cities, it's obvious that a historic amount of care went into every single detail.

SKIES OF

✻ Heralded as the RPG to best Panzer Dragoon Saga,

In the beginning...

As one of the long running projects being developed by Overworks, one of the Sega's in-house development teams, Skies of Arcadia has perpetually played the underdog to GameArts' Grandia II. Why? Well, it seems that Japanese gamers love their sequels—and when that sequel happens to be the follow up to one of the most beloved RPGs, well then, somebody's got to play second fiddle. This is especially true for Dreamcast, which has received very little in the way of support as far as RPGs go.

Yet despite the looming presence of Grandia, Skies of Arcadia manages to come out swinging with such a fresh and unique feel that I can't help but suspect that the team behind it would be great to invite over for dinner: these folks love games. From the character designs to the dungeon layouts to the level of detail in gameplay, Skies is one of the most well thought out and strikingly original RPGs for the traditional set—and it's a Dreamcast exclusive. But having a precedent-setting title doesn't mean that it's all fruit punch and pixie-pink roses. Instead, there's always a compromise to be made somewhere down the line...and Skies does have its share of flaws.

Captain, My Captain

I was going to start off this paragraph with the statement: "If I had a dime for everytime a RPG took place in some quasifuturistic medieval-esque world...", but I won't. Instead, I'll simply begin by introducing you to Arcadia: a world completely different from any other RPG world, dotted by islands of varying size that float not in massive oceans of water, but in seas of wind, fog and clouds.

The only way you can travel between islands is to sail in fantastic ships that resemble the Santa Maria more than the Starship Enterprise. This detail gives Skies an original twist, placing the characters and the entire feel of the game squarely in the Age of Discovery, rather than in the usual generic far-past/far-future era.

Enter Ylze, a young, adventurous Blue Pirate who travels the skies with his father's crew, the Blue Rogues, and dreams of one day having his own ship. But don't be fooled by the eye-patches and skull and crossbones; those who call themselves Blue Pirates aren't the sort of swashbuckling air raiders that make women padlock their pantaloons in panic and send children and deckhands scurrying belowdecks the moment they appear on the horizon.

ARCADIA

Sega's Skies of Arcadia finally flies home to the US

Instead, the Blue Pirates play the role of airborne Robin Hoods, spending their days seeking out unclaimed treasure, exploring new lands, and beating everyone who preys upon the innocent or exploits the less fortunate to a snot-slinging pulp. And Vyse, along with his childhood friend, Aika, are shining examples of this ideal; willing to stick their necks out to help someone in need, while robbing the enemy blind to teach them a lesson.

During a routine trip for the Blue Rogues, Vyse and his father Dyne stumble across an Empire ship firing upon a smaller, unarmed vessel carrying an unconscious young woman. In a particularly intrepid mood, the Rogues close in to rescue the girl and fight off her attackers. After the fight is through, the crew lands back at their base of operations with the mysterious young woman safely in their care. And soon after, Vyse and Aika's lives begin to change dramatically.

Character Study

One of the striking features that never seems to wear thin in Arcadia is the amazing strength of its characters; equal credit must go to the superb localization of the game's dialog (kudos to Sega for not cheating out) and to the amazingly expressive facial expressions of each and every single character. After playing through so many badly translated games across every gaming system (N64 and PlayStation included), it was a singular wonder to be reading such descriptive and concise text outlining everything from a simple signpost to how Aika feels about the weather. And it manages to convey tons of emotion without ever getting excessively wordy, surprisingly.

The dialog between all of the characters has a singular feel, with an incredible amount of attention being given to the natural flow of conversation. It may not win any prizes for literary merit the way, say, Vagrant Story would have, >>

Arcadia's Most Wanted

Meet the mugs behind the flag, lest you end up on the wrong end of the...um, eyepatch. Okay, scratch that.

Vyse

Young, feisty and packing enough courage to save the world from doom, Vyse dreams of one day having a ship and crew to call his own. Nicknamed "Hand-some," he's brave, loyal and still single.

Aika

Quick to the punch and constantly thinking about money, Aika does have a caring soul that may be hard to notice at first beneath her wacky exterior. Count on her to be first on the draw and loyal to the end.

Fina

The mysterious stranger with an even more mysterious mission, Fina is more reserved than Aika, but she yearns to learn more about the world. With Cupil as her companion, she's the party's most powerful magic user.

Drachma

A salty man of the seas, Drachma hides a deep wound that forces him to forever chase down the dangerous growhale named Rhanikam. He's a powerful ally along with his ship, the Little Jack.

Gilder

The free spirited ladies' man, Gilder cruises the open skies looking for "the good life", which roughly translates into: women, women, and more women.

Belleza

One of the much feared Valus Admirals, Belleza's strength lies in her cunning more than physical force. She uses tricks and schemes to get the upper hand in a fight, but she's not evil. Instead, she's loyal to the wrong master, but will she realize this before it's too late?

Treasure Map

When you begin your adventure, you can access an old fashioned pirate's world map via the Start Button when traveling through the skies. As you reach new areas of the map, not only does it get bigger, but more of it is revealed to you. Therefore, at the start, you'll have nothing but one marked island and some sky, and at the end of the game, you'll have a fully illustrated map with every location marked. This is crucial to keep track of where you've been and what areas of the world you have yet to explore. So, make like Columbus or some more politically correct explorer (oh, wait—there are none) and get discoverin', plratel!

Carro (Grandia II) Vs Cupil (Skies of Arcadia)

There are two different types of RPG pets the ones that simply look cute or the ones that look cute and kick ass. Perfect example of the former is Carro, the squeaky squirrel-type creature who lurks in dark caves and loves to feed on Poff Nuts. If Ryado finds enough Poff Nuts and feeds them to Carro, it will do a little dance, then attach itself to him, acting like a light to illuminate dark corridors. But not much else.

Cupil, on the other hand, is Fina's weird MacMan-like morphing sidekick in Skies. Though Cupil starts off as nothing but a weakling, depending on how many Chams you feed it, it can transform into more destructive forms ranging from a Star to a Claymore and beyond.

Hence, our gold's on Cupil in a fight.

Sorry, Carro

It's the little things in Skies that make it all seem so amazing. From the spectacular special skills that can be performed in battle (above left) to the fact that you can see Vyse's breath in the ice Ruins (above), there are so many little touches that it's easy to become immersed in the world of Arcadia. The Overworks team has also taken great pains to vary up what the townspeople say and how often they change their lines. The result is an incredibly interesting world.

The sense of freedom while sailing the >> deepens the involvement I had with each of the characters and their independent struggles throughout the game. Only occasionally did I notice a hiccup during an interaction.

And it certainly doesn't hurt that each and every one of the main characters (Aika, Vyse, Fina) in the game is so darned likeable, even to a fault. Vyse, the heroic young warrior, really is the kind of guy you'd turn to in a pinch. Strong, noble and caring, his bond with both the spunky Aika and the quiet, demure Fina feels genuine and never falters. And through all the troubles and tangles that they inevitably get into to, they stick together no matter what. As hokey as it sounds, I loved every bit of their camaraderie.

But not everything's cheery in Arcadia. Things are swiftly changing in the political atmosphere—something dark is going on within the skies of Valua, a nearby country along the northern border of the Blue Rogues' base in the MidOcean. Valua is after Fina for an undisclosed reason, therefore Vyse and Aika pledge to keep her from harm; but from the moment she's safely in the Blue Rogues' hands, things begin to go horribly wrong. The lives of many innocent people are suddenly and mysteriously on the line. And what's a self-respecting pirate with integrity to do in these circumstances? There's no choice but to set sail into the sky and find a way to stop the badness!

Along the way, Vyse, Fina and Aika meet up with all sorts of curious folk, some friendly and some not so friendly. But be they friend or foe, every single recurring character in the game is given a well-rounded and somewhat complex personality. Overworks, the development team, wasn't content with making any of the characters one-dimensional, and this concern shows in the storyline with its various plot twists and intertwined interactions. And while many of the cast do fall into certain RPG stereotypes (i.e., the noble hero, the wispy spell caster, the slow, but powerful brute) each is given such rich personalities and back stories that you almost don't even notice.

I was particularly impressed with the character of Belleza, one of the Valua Armada Generals. Though she's fighting for the opposing side, she does so with honor and with complete faith in her queen. Her motivation is not blind zealotry; she simply loves her country—along with the handsome general who's commanding the troops.

But while the storyline and characters remain Skies' strongest features, they might not satisfy all your cravings or scratch all your itches. Seasoned roleplayers know how positively great it can be to wield a sword or a blade as a bad-assed mercenary stranger who blows into town and kicks heiney without adhering to any sort of honor code (a la Ryudo in Grandia II). It's equally fun to watch this kind of guy grow into a respectable warrior, fighting for what he believes in and for what is Good. In Skies, Vyse is so incredibly likeable and endearing right off the bat, that it's difficult to truly identify with him in any other context. Still, this is merely a very teeny, weensy quibble in Skies' otherwise amazingly assembled cast.

Discovery Channel

Remember that you're flying around in the Age of Discovery. With this in mind, you'll no doubt thrill at the chance to make all sorts of wacky discoveries throughout your adventure. These "discoveries" can be made anywhere on the game map and pop up if you're in the right place by pressing the A button. Your discoveries will be logged in your Journal under Discoveries and with over 40 entries to fill, you'll be busy slogging if you can get 'em all.

You should also be warned that a fellow treasure hunter by the name of Domingo is also on the lookout for new things to discover and if you beat him out, you'll be able to sell your Discovery information for a pretty profit. If you get beat to the punch, expect only pocket change. How clever and cool is that?

skies is overwhelming and exhilarating

Freedom

If you've ever played an RPG before, you know the drill: walk around the world map and cruise around for half of the game and you'll eventually receive a ship. Then, when you near the final dungeon, you'll be granted an upgrade: an airship! Cool, huh? No slogging through dungeons and fighting with bosses just so you can bop around the map with ease.

Instead, there are other conventions in place to ensure that you can't access the entire world map (like air rifts and stone reefs) at once, as well as random battles to be fought ship-to-ship and hand-to-hand on your ship's deck. Nevertheless, the sense of immediate freedom is simultaneously overwhelming and exhilarating.

With a massive world map to explore and so many things to see and do, you'll find yourself spending just as much time progressing through the storyline as in seeking out new Discoveries (see boxout) and filling in the game map (see boxout). But wandering the open air also leads to random and not so random battles against weird creatures, as well as the dreaded Black Pirates. Yes, Black Pirates. Yes, not every pirate in Arcadia feels obliged to devote his energies to good. And if Vyse runs into them, it's a fight for sure. While random stock battles are fought in character on the deck of your ship, fighting against rival pirates means pulling out the big cannons for some serious air combat.

Fight, Fight, Fight

It's always been a bit up in the air as to how the ship battles in Skies would be handled. Would they be turn-based? Would they happen regularly when you're steering your ship? Or are they relegated to special events? It turns out that the answer is all of the above, to some degree. It all depends on where you and your enemies are, and what you're doing.

If you're strolling around a dungeon on foot, it's given that you'll be fighting the good fight with your fists. But if you're up in the air, there's a chance that you may run into another ship or a creature so big that neither Vyse's swords nor Akla's boomerangs can help you.

When this happens, you'll open a new screen which allows you to enter specific commands, for using magic (altered spells to suit the situations), healing (with repair kits) or different types of cannon attacks. In order to pull off some of the more spectacular attacks with equipable cannons or your stationary main cannon, you'll need the right amount of Spirit Points (SP) and to find the option to do so on the command grid. The command grid is your best way to gauge the most opportune times to do the most damage to your enemy in a given round, or when it's best to guard against an impending special counter-attack. Though it's turn-based to the nth degree, the command grid forces you to plan your attacks accordingly and employ some good old-fashioned strategic thinking. >>

Rank and File

One of the coolest features in Skies of Arcadia undoubtedly has to be Vyse's upgradeable ranking. On the menu screen, Vyse has a "title" that changes from time to time, depending on how you handle yourself in battle and when making tough decisions during your journey. See, a man of honor and integrity is measured by the choices he makes, right? Listen for a chime when choosing from multiple choices in a conversation. A chime means you've made the right decision. Any other sound means you're demoted, peasant.

Eternal Otaku

10/05/00: It is Thursday morning, and OCM is standing outside the LAOX game store here in Akihabara to witness Eternal Arcadia's first few moments on the world stage. It's 1:00:15pm (15 minutes before three members of the game's creative team turn up to greet the anxious RPG otaku) and there's already a line of fans forming outside the store. Everyone's clutching a LAOX bag containing the limited edition box set of the game but we've had to make do with the @bazal (Internet tria) version which looks sadly pathetic in its DVD-like casing alongside its considerably more illustrious big brother. Under the card slipcover, the limited edition is housed in an ornate-looking brown box that opens up like an old book and is printed to look like some dusty ancient tome. Inside, is the game itself (on two discs), an art book, a skull bracelet, a blue sea pirate bandana, a "mascot strap" (for a cellphone) and three little game mascots.

Best of all, though, and the reason for our little outing this morning, is the opportunity to have your limited edition signed by the people who made the game. By 1:50, the store has sold its supply of 50 boxes and a quick count confirms that everyone who bought it is standing in line waiting to meet their idols. At 1:55pm, producer Kodama-san, Hoshino and Ocho-san duly troop up to a table set outside the store entrance and prepare their writing quills. As well as having the team write "thank you" on their game boxes, the lucky few also get a bonus Eternal Arcadia poster and commemorative bag.

Skipping off work to collect his copy and get it signed is Sugawara-san, standing next to us in the line and now the victim of a quick Gestapo-like questioning. Serves him right for baling ahead of us:

Q. How come you're here on a Thursday morning to get your game signed? Are you a student?

A. No, I took the morning off work! I don't have to go back in until after lunch.

Q. Did you reserve your copy?

A. Yes, about a week ago, although I see they're still selling them this morning.

Q. Yeah, but they've just said out.

A. Really? Yokozai! (this means he's delighted he made the reservation and managed to get a copy).

Q. (Sugawara-san looks a bit worried)

What's up?

A. I'm really nervous!

Q. What, to go and get your game signed?

A. Yes I love their games. Sega games are great.

Q. Any recent favorites?

A. Grandia II. I've finished it, though. I love RPGs.

Q. Are you going to talk to them (the Eternal Arcadia team)?

A. I don't think so! I'm too nervous!

(He did though, and they were very friendly to him!)

Sugawara-san (above) and a load full of other fans get heavily with Skies

The extremes between the different locales in Skies shows that plenty of thought went into each of the games' different lands. From the leafy tree-tops of Hortosa (top left) to the dusty sands in Maramba (top right), the level of design in each village is stunning enough to forgive how small each town actually is. The cool thing is that there so much to see and do on your first run through each new land that you'll be well occupied.

(Valuan Spectre Spellship)
Impudent Air Pirate, you dare challenge the Armada? You'll learn to fear the Magic Cannons aboard these these new Spellships!

Once I fell head over heels

>>The sense of scale in certain ship battles is also incredibly amazing to see in action. The moment you enter a fight with a creature that also serves as a weapon of mass destruction (we can't give it all away, now, can we?), then you know you're in for a long, hard battle. While I wish that there was some way to control the actual movement of ships on the screen during a fight, the ship battles often almost seemed like chess matches with firepower. They aren't as grandiose as the glorious airfights in Panzer Dragoon Saga, but there is something very similar in feel between the two.

Apart from the ship battles, you'll also have to fight hand-to-hand. Turn-based, but using a somewhat clever magic system and SP meter to nearly replace the need for magic points, the combat in Arcadia is very basic.

All characters are able to learn the same basic spells, such as healing and various elemental attacks through a system of Moon Stones. Once you stumble across one of the colored Moon Stones, you'll be able to change your weapon to that specific color on the fly in battle by pressing the Y button. Doing so will not only affect your enemy differently, depending on its weakness, but you'll also beef up that specific Moon Stone's magic category.

For example, you have a Green Moon Stone and a Purple Moon Stone. You stumble across some creatures in combat possessing Red Moon Stone elements. If your weapon is green, then you can press the Y button to switch it to purple which will do more damage to red creatures. At the end of the battle, you'll gain points towards your Purple Moon Stone, thus giving you a chance to gain more Ice Elemental spells. The system keeps you sharp and eager to learn.

You can also learn unique skills for each character by collecting smaller Moonstones. You can distribute these items to whichever character you choose, in order to access some very Ship battles are impressive both visually and from a gameplay standpoint. While they aren't as flexible or interactive as the ones in Panzer Dragoon Saga are, the sense of scale is equally amazing.

As you near the final confrontation in Skies, you'd be missing out if you didn't spend enough time cruising through the world to pick up on the many secrets and whatnot hidden through the game.

into Skies' plot, I never looked back, even for a minute ☘ cool specials which are crucial for tough fights later on in the game.

While the elemental system is clever and the skills interesting, the encounter rate when flying through the open skies or tooling around the dungeons is so high that you'll find yourself tiring of it rather quickly. It also doesn't help that the pace of battle can sometimes feel very slow. This is probably Skies' weakest aspect, especially when compared to the amazing battle system in Grandia II. But nonetheless, I found the adventure so compelling that it wasn't difficult to overlook the problems. Still, I couldn't help but wish for something a bit more inspired. Battle II, after all, where most fans will spend the bulk of their time.

Building Castles in the Air

I would be doing a disservice to readers if I failed to mention the overall pace of Skies. Up until a certain point in the game, I found it to be a bit slow. It never quite plodded, per se—but it wasn't exactly wham-bam-thank-you-ma'am, either. But (and it's a big "but") something happened several hours into playing that changed the whole game and drew me in for the long run. Though that point will differ from player to player, it's guaranteed that there'll be an event that grabs you, keeping you enthralled for the duration of Skies.

And this is what impressed me about Skies. Once I fell head over heels into the plot, I never quite looked back. I wanted to play nonstop and discover everything that the game had to offer. And what it has to offer is nothing short of amazing in terms of depth.

As the game goes on, Vyse will be charged with assembling a whole new crew of characters to help build a fort and base. And much like Konami's Sulikoden I & II on PlayStation, these characters are found in various places and occupations. But what separates Skies from Sulikoden is the effect these character will have on your ship, as well as on your fort. I certainly don't want to ruin the surprises that you're in for thanks to this option, so I'll leave it at this: never underestimate the power of sub-quests to involve you in a game—and fast.

The Final Chapter

I haven't even touched on the marvelous graphics in Skies! But rest assured that everything from the special effects to the character models to the facial expressions all serve to impress. Everything simply screams high production value, and it does nothing but enhance an already strong story played out by great characters. If no other RPG (besides Grandia II, of course) was released for Dreamcast, its legacy would still be complete with Skies of Arcadia. Go out and experience it now. It'd be criminal to miss out on the ride.

One-Up Your Dreamcast

PUBLISHER: KONAMI
DEVELOPER: KONAMI
GENRE: ACTION/ADVENTURE
RATING: E (ESRB) / PEGI 3
RETAIL: $49.99 (US) / £24.99 (UK)

GRAPHICS 10

Filled with stunning textures and expressive characters

SOUND 10

Memorable music and unique SFX

CONTROL 9

Ships feel a little slow, some delayed response

GAMEPLAY 10

Great gameplay with new, innovative twists

Score: 10

Unreal Tournament ©2000 Epic Games, Inc. All rights reserved. Control by Epic Games, Inc. in accordance with Digital Services, Initiated by Intergame, Inc. Intergame and the Intergame logo are trademarks of Epic Games, Inc. The Intergame and the "YES" Family logo are registered trademarks of Sony Computer Entertainment Inc. Sony, Dreamcast and the Dreamcast logo are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Sony Computer Entertainment Inc. All other trademarks are the property of their respective owners.

AS SEEN ON TV

UNREAL™ TOURNAMENT

ALSO GOOD

100 HEAVY-DUTY STAPLES

Animated Violence
Animated Blood
and Gore

Dreamcast

PlayStation 2

MODEL UT-00

HEAD BLOW'D OFF REPAIR KIT

FOR REATTACHING ARMS, LEGS AND FINGERS!

2 Year
Limited
Home Use
Warranty

INCLUDED WITH STAPLE GUN

Unreal™ Tournament's fast and furious, single and multiplayer experience comes to life on PlayStation®2 computer entertainment system and Sega Dreamcast™. Lead your team of virtual teammates against the deadliest gladiators in the galaxy. Mind-blowing realistic 3D graphics. High-octane gameplay.

Totally Unreal combat action.
Just be sure not to lose your head.

Get up close and personal in the first-person perspective with over 10 weapons of destruction! Screenshots are from the PlayStation®2 system.

Go online with up to 8 players on your Sega Dreamcast™, play 2- or 4-player split screen, or network 2 PlayStation®2's systems with i.LINK™.

Expect core Unreal graphics and a multitude of maps and weapons—all in a frame rate so fast it's Unreal.

© 1999 CAPCOM CO., LTD. 2000 © CAPCOM U.S.A., INC. 2000. All Rights Reserved. All trademarks are the property of their respective holders. All other trademarks are the property of their respective holders. All other trademarks are the property of their respective holders.

TAKING HELL TO THE NEXT LEVEL.

Dreamcast

CAPCOM
CAPCOM.COM

TODD MCFARLANE
ENTERTAINMENT
SPAWN.COM

"The true essence of all that is Spawn." -Gameweek

-Todd McFarlane's blockbuster comic book characters come to life on Sega Dreamcast

-Compete in the four-player simultaneous Battle Royal mode

-Includes the original Arcade Mode and tournament style Dreamcast Mode

-All your favorite characters from the Spawn series are faithfully recreated in the ultimate death match challenge

COMING SOON

PlayStation

Arc Systems' only real (albeit amazing!) 2D fighter—dustily dear on PlayStation—might not be a title that readily pops into fighting fans' heads as fantastic...but hardcore virtual scrappers revere it for its innovative gameplay and charismatic characters. If you have a PlayStation (or beam! for DC; here's hoping), check it out. It does rock.

Guilty Gear X

If fighting games were humans, we do dare say that Guilty Gear X would be a god among men

Since its inception, Sega's system has been a sanctuary for 2D fighting games. With its Herculean pixel-pushing prowess, the Dreamcast has finally allowed developers to deliver on their previously unfilled promise of pixel-perfect arcade conversions—with all of the extraordinary speed, color and animation of their coin-op counterparts. Unsurprisingly, it has been Capcom who has spearheaded this effort, with more than a half-dozen such titles gracing the console. Now, a new contender is set to enter the fray—and believe it or not, it might just raise the already oh-so-high bar in 2D fighting.

One of the most beloved-yet-underappreciated videogames in recent memory, the original Guilty Gear (which came home on PlayStation) defined itself with its well-balanced gameplay, wonderful art design and extremely tight control. This sequel takes this solid foundation and brings it to the next level, retaining the original's spectacular gameplay and combining it with a look and feel entirely its own—one which

Lickety slick

REG. AND THE TONGUE sticking out in this picture...this is exactly what our tongues look like right now...as we wait for the debut of these 60-frames-per-second. Trust us, the 2D folks in this game are prettier than your 3D girlfriend (don't tell her that, if you want to keep her). We predict that you'll be hand-presses to find a fighter to equal GGX when it releases.

simply screams next millennium.

And not only does GGX make beautiful use of the 2D characters' at-3D backgrounds technique first employed in Marvel vs. Capcom 2, but it actually does something that no 2D fighting game has ever managed to do before—it uses high-resolution 640x480 characters. While this might not sound like a big deal, trust us—it makes all the difference in the world. If you're a fan of hand-illustrated, manga-style characters, you simply must see these massive,

"The high-res fighters in GGX will impress the most jaded of gamers" EVAN SHAMMOON

This is a towering inferno of spine-tingling, lip-smacking, eye-gouging 2D goodness. Especially if you've got a VGA monitor, it's like having an honest-to-goodness arcade machine in your home. Droptail Newsflash: Dina just announced that she has sprained her lifestyle.

well-animated sprites (14 of which are available at the game's start) dash around the screen at lightspeed. And no more rough edges or blocky pixelation—these high-res fighters will impress even the most jaded gamers.

Guilty Gear X also manages to distinguish itself from the pack with its original, purposeful fighting systems—of which the most notable is the Tension Gauge. Essentially, this is a meter at the bottom of the screen which is filled by the character moving forward or performing attacks. When the meter is full, the character will have access to an assortment of powerful attacks. This serves as a clear incentive for players to be aggressive in their fighting styles, and prevents matches from settling into defensive blockfests. It's a novel idea, and one which will have a huge effect on the style and pacing of each battle.

What can't be seen in these cutscenes are the goals of animation being thrown around the screen. Droptail Newsflash: I think we're done! A magazine, now! says Dave, three days before our Someone Gets Fired deadline.

Recently demonstrated in front of a ravenous crowd at this Fall's Tokyo Game Show, Guilty Gear X has already solidified its place as a system-selling game in Japan. While it is entering into an extremely crowded niche genre—which is even more extremely crowded on Dreamcast—Guilty Gear X promises to stand on its own two feet (more than that, if you count all the characters) as a spectacular game. So until we get our hands on the import, we're all about drooling.

EVAN SHAMMOON

PUBLISHER: SEGA (JAPAN) USA: SEGA OF AMERICA
SYSTEM REQUIREMENTS: 100MB RAM, 10MB FREE SPACE, 10MB FREE SPACE
PLAYERS: 1-2 RELEASE DATE: JANUARY 1998

PLUSES (+)
Best high-res 2D graphics we've ever seen, with outrageous new lighting systems

MINUSES (-)
If you don't dig on 2D fighters, you probably won't dig on this

BOTTOM LINE
Bigger, better, faster, prettier and more original than any 2D fighter we've seen. We'll put it in a pipe and smoke it

Welcome to COMING SOON

Previewed This Month

Anticipation is sweet, and these DC games could be even sweeter. Read on, and find out what you'll be playing in months to come!

GUILTY GEAR X/60 Fighting fans everywhere rejoice
COASTER WORKS/62 If you build it, they will come RE3: NEMESIS/63 The Master of Unlocking™ returns!
SOUL REAVER 2/64 Raziel and Co. here are to reave again
CHICKEN RAIN/66 License done right? You be the judge
EVIL DEAD: HAIL TO THE KING/73 Hail to Sam Raimi
SONIC SHUFFLE/74 More mascot madness from Sega
BANG! GUNSHIP ELITE/74 In space, no one can hear
CHARGE'N BLAST/76 Arcade shooters return to Dreamcast
BANGAI-O/77 Treasure tears us for another shootin' classic
IRON ACES/77 How blue is the wild blue yonder?

At least apples and oranges are both fruits. The world doesn't get any more diverse than Sonic Shuffle (page 74) and Chicken Rain (page 66).

INCOMING!

All Dreamcast, all the time: planned releases for 2000 and beyond

102 Distractions: Rescue Adventure	Nov	Test Drive LeMans Racing	Dec
Army Merc: Sarge's Heroes Strategy	Nov	Xtreme Sports Soccer	Dec
Bandi Gumbale Elite Shooter	Nov	Austin Powers: Mojo Rally Racing	Q4
Capcom Vs. SNA Fighting	Nov	Dark Angel Action	Q4
Championship Surfer Sports	Nov	INRA Drag Racing Racing	Q4
Chicken Rain Action	Nov	World's Deadliest: Pol. Chases Driving	Q4
Dave Winn Freestyle BMX Sports	Nov	Star Wars Super Bombad Racing	Q4
Dear Avarage Shooter	Nov	Urban Chase Action	Q4
Dino Crisis Action	Nov	Unreal Tournament FPS	Jan
E.D.S. Action	Nov	Armadillo Shooter/RPG	Jan
EDW: Anarchy Rule: Wrestling	Nov	Carrom Spike Action/Shooter	Jan
Heresies of Might & Magic 3 RPG	Nov	Darklands: Network Racing Racing	Jan
Hoyle Casino Games Casino	Nov	Garfield 2 Shooter	Jan
How the Grin角度 Positioner	Nov	Phantasy Star Online Online RPG	Jan
Lenore: Texas Space Race Racing	Nov	Allen Priest Online/Action/Action	Q1
Ms. Pac-Man's Maze Madness Arcade	Nov	18 Wheeler: Amigo Truckster Driving	Q1
Peacekeepers Strategy	Nov	Dark Trigger Shooter/Action	Q1
Project Justice Fighting	Nov	Alone in the Dark IV Adventure	Q2
Ready 2 Battle: 2nd Red Sports	Nov	Dragon Riders Adventure	Q2
Resident Evil 2 Nemesis Action	Nov	Mutt Hoffman's ProBMX Sports	Q2
Shenmue Adventure	Nov	11 Beated Action	Q2
Sides of Arcadia RPG	Nov	Apogee Adventure	Q2
Sonic Shuffle Multiplayer Puzzle	Nov	Black & White Strategy	Q2
StarLancer Online Shooter	Nov	Buffy the Vampire Slayer Action	Q2
Star Wars: Demolition Racer Racing	Nov	Heligan Brothers Action	Q2
Speed World Online Racing	Nov	Gaillon Adventure	Q2
The Next Battle Online Puzzle	Nov	Neodreamer Adventure	Q2
Tom's Raider Chronicles Adventure	Nov	Heavy Metal FAN Shooter	Q2
Tony Hawk's Pro Skater 2 Sports	Nov	Legend of the Bloodmages RPG	Q2
Vanishing Point Racing	Nov	MDK2: 2025: Shredder Action	Q2
Warner Bros. Party Hackyarder	Nov	NBA Hoops Sports	Q2
Bangai-O Shooter	Nov	Planet of the Apes Action	Q2
Charge'N Blast Action	Dec	Roswell Conspiracy Action	Q4
Coaster Works Sim	Dec	Soldier of Fortune Action/Shooter	Q4
Dave Winn Freestyle BMX Sports	Dec	Sonic Adventure 2 Platformer	Q4
Evil Dead: Hail to the King Action	Dec	Sonic Riders 2 Adventure	Q4
Garfield II RPG	Dec	Spec Ops: Demago Squad Stealthy	Q4
Half-Life FPS	Dec	Picassio Action	TBA
Iron Aces: Fight Sim	Dec	Quark RPG	TBA
Max Steel Action	Dec
Princess of Persia 3D Action	Dec
Reboot of Lodestar War RPG	Dec
Slant GP Racing	Dec
Soul Rocket Racers Racing	Dec
Soulman Shock 2 Shooter/RPG	Dec
Sno Cross Int. Champ. Racing	Dec

Raziel shows gamers everywhere, once again, that size does indeed matter...especially when it comes to the girth of your selected weapon. The bigger the blade, the bigger the kill.

Whoever says that Dreamcast lags behind PS2 in terms of graphics quality certainly hasn't seen what Crystal Dynamics has done with Soul Reaver 2. Every environment, character and object is modeled with high polygon counts in mind.

Legacy of Kain: Soul Reaver 2

Have Reaver, Will Travel: Raziel returns to dish up a dose of instant demon death

Uhere may be no other game—other than NFL 2K—that demonstrated the superiority of Dreamcast more clearly, right from the start, than the “port” of Legacy of Kain: Soul Reaver. The graphics were unbelievable, control was better than that of the PlayStation version, and the gameplay soared. Until you got to the cliffhanger ending, that is.

Soul Reaver 2 finally completes the story of top demon Kain’s quest to destroy top top demon Kain (who was always just jealous of Raziel’s wings, anyway)—although the folks at Eidos are keen to make it clear that Soul Reaver 2 is a complete game in and of itself, and that you can figure out what’s going on even if you haven’t played the first one.

And in a brave leap forward from cost-effectiveness to creative integrity, the company hasn’t used anything from the first game that ended up on the cutting room floor: It’s all new material. Although Crystal Dynamics and Eidos are being coy about revealing details of the game (as well they should be; we don’t want the story wrecked anymore than they do!), it’s clear that you’ll be solving the mysteries of the genocide of your vampire brothers, the corruption of the pillars, and more.

Style-wise, well, let’s just say that someone over at Crystal has been listening to a lot of Sisters of Mercy. Like its predecessors, Soul Reaver 2 is gothic to its dark, lonely core. But this ‘style’ goes beyond a fixation on the color black and a bleak sound track. As in the last game, design really comes through in the architecture of the levels. Thanks to some killer-level design, you really feel as though you’re exploring dark, lost, bleak, yet still eerily beautiful environments—and not just wandering down generic halls with pentagram textures (the game design equivalent of wood paneling) on the walls. Even if there were no gameplay here—and there is—simply exploring the levels would be a wonderful visual experience.

And even better, because the title was designed

Alucard: Reaver by Design

WHILE IT’S ARGUABLE that Raziel may be the tougher of the two vampires, what if the question came down to who’s the cooler blood and soul sucker? Well, unfortunately for Raziel, we’d have to go with Alucard (Castlevania: Symphony of the Night). But the two vamps do have plenty in common.

POINT #1:

Parties. Both are reluctant demons with a score to settle. Raziel has been cast into the Underworld by his former master, while Alucard wants to free the neo-vamp world from his Dad’s—the Count’s—evil clutches.

POINT #2:

Morphing. Women love guys who can morph, and both Raziel and Alucard do it. Alucard transforms, while Raziel shape-shifts through time. Oooh, baby.

"Like its predecessors, Soul Reaver 2 is gothic to its dark, lonely core." DAVID BARKER

Raziel will be able to transport items from place to place in order to solve puzzles.

Creativity usesages of skills was a strength from the original LoK-SR. This time, it all gets even more complex.

Though the levels look a little lonely at this point in the game's development cycle, you can expect that there will be plenty for Raziel to see and do on his new adventure.

The variety in environments was already impressive in the original, but Crystal Dynamics ensures that there will be even more depth and detail in every inch of the sequel's terrain.

You'll have to sharpen your weapon in order to duel with all sorts of new enemies. The list is impressive, and it includes human vampire hunters as well as foes that Eldos terms "extra-dimensional demons." These enemies may indeed add an extra dimension to combat, in that you cannot escape them as easily as you could in earlier titles in the series. You'll have to outwit them, instead of simply heading into battle swinging.

Sister Act

ONE OF THE SEMINAL bands of the gothic movement (the one in this century), the Sisters of Mercy helped to turn the color black into the moody poet of the visible spectrum. Their somber lyrics and music—you could call it dirge metal—made us happy to be sad and mad.

Fronted by Bowie-boy Andrew Eldritch (note the Dr. Evil pose), the group stayed cool throughout the '90s and lives today—in spirit—in the design ethos of Crystal Dynamics' dark and lovely Soul Reaver games.

simultaneously for Dreamcast and PlayStation2, without the legend PlayStation 1 dragging things down, the graphics are simply breathtaking. The detail is exactly what you've always expected from Dreamcast, and polygon counts are immense: every character has at least double the polygons that you saw in the first game. Texture maps are also immense, and the game runs at a rock solid 60 fps. Oh, and of course, the lighting and special effects are fantastic.

The storyline has Raziel exploring various epochs of the world of Nosgoth's past: he'll rediscover characters and areas both from Soul Reaver 1 and Blood Omen: Legacy of Kain, the game that started the whole blood-sucking series in the first place. But again,

Crystal is keen to point out that "This won't be a cheesy time travel story," and that the game's plot will attempt to explore deeper questions of destiny-versus-free will and good-versus-evil. Sounds a little literary, for our tastes, but hey—if that's what these folks need to think about to make a great game, more power to 'em.

Raziel will have a lot more tools at his disposal, this time around, to facilitate his exploration: he'll learn nine new abilities (including spells), and gain seven new reavers to summon—one for each of the elemental reaver forges he'll discover at various places in Nosgoth. Each of the seven reavers can also be powered up and enhanced. Although earning these powers will be essential to solving the game—especially since there are now far more enemies, and a great variety of enemies and boss monsters—the team is attempting to keep gameplay as nonlinear as possible by ensuring that two or three quests or options are always available at any one time.

Puzzles have also been stepped up significantly, with fewer "push-the-block-flip-the-switch" puzzles and more in-depth challenges that tie directly into the plot and feel organic within the game world. Raziel's new abilities will also enable deeper and more complex puzzle mechanics.

Soul Reaver 1 was a triumph:

a beautiful game that had great game mechanics. Now Soul Reaver 2 looks to take the entire experience to the next level. What can we say? Let the blood-letting begin!

CHRIS CHARLA

The Official
Dreamcast

PUBLISHER: EIDOS
DEVELOPER: CRYSTAL DYNAMICS
GENRE: VAMPIRE ACTION ADVENTURE
ONLINE PLAYERS: UNLIMITED RELEASE DATE: SPRING

PLUSES [+]

Great design, great style, makes us want to wear black.

MINUSES [-]

The puzzles were tough last time. If they're tougher this time it may be wicked frustrating.

BOTTOM LINE [-]

We love a good vamp game, especially when it actually has a compelling story.

SPEED 032 Km/h
VG 0.99 G
HG 0.00 G

00:15:00

It'll take a while for you to get the hang of constructing your own roller coaster, but once you complete one, it's a joy ride from there on out. But if you mess up in gauging the coaster's angles, you may have to start over from scratch in order to create a successful ride. Our angles were a little on the sharp side (above).

Kiddstown Park

COURSE CONDITIONS

WIDTH 150 m
DEPTH 50 m
HEIGHT 30 m
MAXIMUM ANGLE 50°
TWISTS NO

OK
CANCEL

SELECT STAGE

Use the Force

ACCORDING TO THE website "World of Coasters," the top gun of all amusement park coasters is a ride called the Millennium Force (this determination was based on a poll of the site's members). Built for speed with a nose drop going at a dizzying 300 feet and nearly 6000 feet of rollercoaster action, the Millennium Force has been the filing station—and spilling their cookies—at Cedar Point in Ohio since earlier this year. Now, just imagine building that into your own roller coaster in Coaster Works, and you'll begin to get the idea of why it could be one heck of an addictive ride.

You'll have a set amount of space to work with and some of the special components must be used before they can be moved. But otherwise, getting your coaster just right is a completely freeform experience.

Coaster Works

If this wasn't a game, all of these ups and downs would put you in therapy

Amusement parks are a perplexing schtick. In perhaps the only industry outside pharmaceutical testing where people willingly pay for someone else to put them through rituals that are almost guaranteed to make them queasy, they also manage to charge you a good $20 bucks for a hot dog and a Coke and leave you walking away with a smile—and sometimes, if you eat and ride in the wrong order, you might even lose the hot dog and the Coke.

Now, Xicat Interactive thinks that it has a handle on the causes of true thrill ride addiction. It's hoping that this upcoming rollercoaster sim, Coaster Works, will be able to give the virtual park-goer a similar satisfaction, sans nausea.

Known as Jet Coaster Dream

In Japan, the entire game was designed and programmed by a single software engineer. So it's fitting that you, all by your lonesome, are about to pick up where he left off as a coaster designer. The rules are simple: follow the instructions of a handy-dandy in-game tutor and build a coaster that fits the specifications of the park.

Each course/park has its own set of limitations, and to help keep you in line, CW starts you off with a pretty lengthy learning session. Once you've completed a kiddo coaster to learn the ropes, you'll try your hand at increasingly impressive metal monsters, until you are the master of whiplash-inducing, free-falling loopy-loops of doom.

Niche marketing

WITH COASTER WORKS on its way to the US, we can only hope that it'll lead the way for other weird and wonderful games, like the underdog Tokyo Bus Guide from Team Rortyfive. It's a heart-stopping title. Truly.

The editor is fully 3-D, and you can test everything out as you go. It even keeps track of stats such as thrill levels and the ride's safety level. Keep in mind, however, that "the figures indicating the number of people who've either lost consciousness or suffered memory loss are only estimates." Oh, my.

If Dreamcast doesn't work for you, or if you can't spare the time or money for a trip to your favorite amusement park, Coaster Works could be the answer to your prayers. But be forewarned: things may look too realistic. If 3D games make your stomach turn, you'll soon be re-evaluating your love for orange food as it passes your lips for the second time around. It's a good thing you don't lose points for regurgitation. BRANDON JUSTICE

Dreamcast

PUBLISHER: XICAT DEVELOPER: XICAT
GENRE: SIM/DRIVER/3D/PLANNING/1 ONLINE VS RELEASE DATE: UNKNOWN

PLUSES [+]

Sim games couldn't be further from a dime-a-dozen on OC, and Coaster Works should fill the gap very nicely.

MINUSES [-]

Could it be too niche-y for the mass market? Ah, who cares when a game has this much promise!

BOTTOM LINE [-]

One of the more intriguing and mostly successful games on OC in Japan is finally winning its way to the US. Sim fans and niche gamers take note!

Your main objective in RE3: Nemesis is to get Jill Valentine out of Raccoon City with her undead buns and all her natural fangs fully intact.

One of the new features that Capcom has added in for the PC and DC versions in RE3: Nemesis is the option to choose any of Jill's eight different outfits at the start of the game. We particularly like the Saturday Night Fever-esque flavor of the top right outfit (right). Ah, ah, ah, ah stayin' alive.

Capcom has 'enhanced' the graphics of all of its PS-to-PC-to-DC ports, including Nemesis. Check out the fire textures for proof (above).

Resident Evil 3: Nemesis

Three times is not only the charm, it's oh, so charming

It was just a matter of time before Capcom brought some of the earlier chapters in its flagship horror series to DC. After porting Resident Evil 2 and 3 to PC in Japan this year, it seemed more like a waiting game than anything else until Capcom announced that either title would make it to the US; and now, just in time for the holidays, the company who invented the art of zombie hunting has finally come through. RE3: Nemesis, as well as RE2, is on the way.

But it's Nemesis that most DC owners may not be so familiar with, because its release coincided with the early days of Dreamcast. For those who've played the first title in the RE series, Nemesis picks up where the original left off with Jill Valentine back in zombie-shooting form. Players will assume her identity in order to escape Raccoon City, while the survival horror, n. = a genre of videogame or movie in which a protagonist must negotiate situations of sensationalist violence, usually having supernatural elements. (source: Oxford English Dictionary, North American edition, 2000) We've arrived!

Horror Defined!

mutated and undead walk the streets freely. Equipped with a machine gun from the start, you'll need more than a mere firearm to battle the hordes of monsters that litter your path.

Like the omnipotent Tyrant in Code Veronica, there's also a horrifying enemy who will dog Jill's every move in the form of Nemesis. But where the game really distinguishes itself from the rest of the survival horror pack is in its branching paths. Your decisions throughout the game will affect the outcome of Jill's plight and the game's ending.

Capcom has made sure to differentiate the DC port of RE3 from its PlayStation counterpart by making several goodies available from the very start of the game. Treats such as eight different costumes for Jill will be initially available, rather than having to be unlocked, as well as the bonus game, Mercenaries, in which you control one of three different Umbrella military members (each with his own specific equipment and characteristics) in a survival type mini-game that mimics the Battle Mode in Code Veronica.

With Nemesis joining the action adventure fray on DC along with Dino Crisis and RE2, gamers won't be left high and dry in the zombie department this holiday season. Fans should definitely take Capcom up on its offer. FRANCESCA REYES

Official Magazine

PUBLISHER: CAPCOM DEVELOPER: CAPCOM
GENRE: SURVIVAL HORROR COUNTRY: JAPAN
PLAYERS: 1 ONLINE: NO RELEASE DATE: NOV

PLUSES [+]

Another RE title for Dreamcast can't be a bad thing at all, can it?

MINUSES [-]

The quality of the port is key to how well RE3 will be ultimately received

BOTTOM LINE [-]

While it's not exactly a reinvention of the survival horror wheel, fans will definitely appreciate the polished effort from Capcom. And you certainly can't beat the asking price: $19.99

Lighting played a huge role in the film—and it's equally significant in the game. Big dog.

"Chicken Run and the Wallace & Gromit films by Aardman are the main influences and inspiration for the game. However, we did take a look at elements of the Resident Evil series and RPGs."
—Blitzgames on Chicken Run

Chicken (Brave) Heart

HE'S PLAYED THE ANGRY PRINCE Hamlet, a killer Colt, and a plucky fowl! Mel Gibson has rubbed on both the dark meat and the light meat of acting for Pacific. The critics at OCOM tout Australian WWI drama Gallipoli as one of his best films ever. See it with Kincaid.

Our entire staff except for Dave absolutely loved Chicken Run, and we recommend that those who haven't yet seen it promptly do so. One never made it out to the movie, but apparently likes to cook chicken 365 different ways, as per the cookbook we found suspiciously stashed behind the microwave in his kitchen.

Chicken Run

It's what's for Dreamcast.

Despite Dreamworks' spectacularly obnoxious cross-promotional tie-in with meat-mogul Burger King, Chicken Run was easily one of the finest movies of 2000. An ingenious homage to John Sturges' The Great Escape (and a slew of other great World War II POW camp escape movies), Chicken Run is an epic battle between man and bird, containment and freedom—poultry and liberty. And apparently, someone over at Blitzgames thought it was a great idea for a videogame. So do we.

Think Metal Gear Solid...with chickens. Gameplay is focused on finding a way for the chickens to fly the coop, so to speak.

Alternating control between Ginger and Rocky, players must use their tactical-espionage-action skills to navigate their way through 14 levels of Tweedy Farm, outwitting dogs, searchlights and the nasty Mr. and Mrs.

Tastes like Chicken?

The production of Chicken Run was nothing short of a technical and creative marvel, and we've compiled a small list of factsoids:

- a) 40 animators worked on the film, which took three years to make.
- b) Claymation requires such impossibly meticulous work that on a typical day 26 individual sets would be operating simultaneously, resulting in ten seconds of completed film.

c) Chicken Run was born when director/producer Nick Park made a simple sketch of a chicken dipping under a wire fence with a spoon.

Tweedy along the way. You'll have to find various objects scattered about the farm, and then use that resourceful brain of yours to figure out how to put the items together in order to expedite your escape. Build a catapult to launch chickens over the fence. Strap fireworks to the backs of your feathered friends (placing you into a mini-game where you shoot them over the fence into various parts of the farmyard). In short: figure out how to get the heck out of Dodge before you're turned into McNuggets.

While the storyline is going to remain consistent with the plot of the movie, gameplay will be as non-linear as possible.

Players will be able to explore environments and complete different tasks in any order they like, and the folks at Blitzgames have scripted the camera to give the player the best view of the action—while it simultaneously provides gorgeous cinematic views throughout the game. A combination of actual movie clips and specially-scripted scenes adds to the excitement of the proceedings as well; oddly, the main engine looks nothing like the animation style used in the game.

Eidos has licensed the original cinematic voice actors (except for Mel Gibson, who's waffling on the project) to bring Chicken Run's world to life.

While the early build we've been playing certainly has a ways to go, the potential is definitely there—and we can't wait to get our hands on a final build.

EVAN SHAMOON

Official Chicken Run Dreamcast

PUBLISHED BY EIDOS DEVELOPER BLITZGAMES
GENRE: ADVENTURE/STRATEGY (14 PLAYERS)
ONLINE: YES (LAN/ADSL/INTERNET)

PLUSES (+)

Great concept, great movie, great potential—we've thoroughly enjoyed what we've played so far.

MINUSES (-)

More out of ten licensed games suck.

BOTTOM LINE (-)

The more of it was set, the more of it we want.

Nobody gets
Phantasy Star Online before we do.

Nobody gets
18 Wheeler: American Pro Trucker before we do.

Nobody gets
Outtrigger before we do.

Nobody gets
Max Steel before we do.

Nobody gets
Unreal Tournament before we do.

Reserve your copy now at any of our over 950 stores nationwide.
Or do it in minutes online at www.gamestop.com.
Either way, nobody gets to play before you do.

gamestop!com FuncoLand

Gamestop

Babbage's

software ETC

PHANTASY STAR™ ONLINE

What's Your Phantasy?

"Thanks to Dreamcast's built-in modem and its Sega Gaming Network, gamers can play Phantasy Star Online with players all across the world. Communication will be handled in realtime, and Sega will combat language differences by allowing characters to talk via symbols. Open-ended play will ensure that a person can log on to the Network to play the game and move freely throughout Phantasy Star's fantastical world. Gameplay takes place on an alien world, and people will be required to battle strange monsters, solve puzzles, and share both information and items. Sega plans a simultaneous release for the game in the United States, Japan, and Europe. Don't miss this one."

— DailyRadar.com

Machine: Dreamcast Genre: Online FPS Publisher: Sega of Players: 1-16 Play: Available January 2001

Huge animated characters make for amazing graphics throughout.

The rich, vibrant colors are in stark contrast to the muddy hues of PC games.

Jump online and play against gamers all over the world.

Your Direct Line To Everything New
Reserve the hottest titles at gamestop.com or visit any of our 950 stores nationwide.

gamestop.com

FuncoLand

Gamestop

Babbage's

software ETC

Ahh, The Open Road, The Clean Air, The Highway Patrol In Your Rear-View Mirror.

"The aim of 18 Wheeler is simple, effective and addictive, which is typical of Sega."

Trucking around the States - starting in New York and eventually winding up in San Francisco—players must carry cargo from one location to another. The idea is not to lose too much of the load and to make it to the destination on time. Players don't compete solely against the clock, however. Instead, there is a rival truck (with an aggressive trucker inside) that wreaks havoc, tries to get to the destination before the player and attempts to force the player off the road at every turn."

—DailyRadar.com

EIGHTEEN 18 WHEELER ☆☆☆☆ AMERICAN PRO TRUCKER ☆☆☆☆

Mechanics: Dreamcast. Genre: Racing
Publishers: Sega. # of Players: 1 Available: February, 2001

Make the corner and lose the competition.

Ohh, you're mine now, motorhead.

Excuse me, good buddy. Comin' through.

Sega Dreamcast Visual Memory Unit by Sega.
Save information from your Dreamcast and play with that data while you are away from your Dreamcast.

Get A Jump On The New Stuff

by reserving it at Gamestop.com or visiting us at any of our 950 stores nationwide.

The MFD Racing Wheel by MFD. It's the next generation of racing wheels.

gamestop!com

FuncoLand

Gamestop

Babbage's

software ETC

Wipe Out Terrorism Without Leaving Your Bedroom.

"Digital equivalents of paintball have been around for a while now.

Sega's effort, Outtrigger, has the potential to top the fiercely contested first-person genre. Yes, while Quake 3, Timesplitters and Unreal Tournament have been on the receiving end of much publicity and hype, Sega's world-famous R&D #2 has been lovingly crafting the shooter to end all shooters. Originally an arcade title, Outtrigger is nevertheless stunningly realistic. In execution it's a match for any of the aforementioned blasters, even standing up to the mighty, albeit dated, GoldenEye." — DailyRadar.com

The battle arenas come in all shapes and sizes.

Prove your worth by progressing through a series of arena-based seek out and kill missions.

Up to four players will be able to compete online via SegaNet.

First In Line or On-Line
Buy newest titles on-line or visit any of our 950 stores nationwide.

The Dreamcast Mouse is the best way to get into your first person shooter games.

gamestop!.com

FuncoLand

Gamestop

Babbage's

software ETC

Half Man, Half Machine, All Bad-Ass.

"This third-person action game will take players through seven levels filled with the evil Dread soldiers. Each level contains up to four sections, and Max Steel will have to kick, punch and explode his way through each one of them to stop the evil organization. Helping Max along the way will be special powers that he can use to his advantage such as Stealth (which turns him invisible for a short time) and Turbo (which should need no explanation). Weapons are laying around just waiting to be picked up by the first passerby. Grenades aplenty can be found in the most obscure places, and can be thrown at enemies or friends, depending on the mood of the player." — DailyRadar.com

Get A Jump On The New Stuff
by reserving it at Gamestop.com or visiting us at any of our 950 stores nationwide.

gamestop!com

FuncoLand

Gamestop

Babbage's

software ETC

Unreal TOURNAMENT

Experience A Whole New Unreality.

"Sometimes it's hard to decide between Ginger or Mary Ann, Mountain Dew or Mello Yello, the Jaguar or the Ferrari. And if we had to make a choice between Quake III Arena and Unreal Tournament we'd hem and haw for a short while then go with Unreal Tournament. Its smoother network code, different styles of play and far superior weapons give it a slight edge in our books. So naturally we were amped to get our hands on it for our new favorite toy. Clear a space on your gaming shelf for this one."

— DailyRadar.com

Sega Dreamcast

Machine: Dreamcast Genre: Action # of Players: 1-8
Publisher: Epic Games Available: November, 2000

32 unbelievably addictive levels designed to maximize the fun.

Gripping single player experience that casts you in the role of a team leader.

Unparalleled user friendliness.

Let the Tremor Pak's solid earth-shaking vibrations through your Dreamcast controller.

First In Line or On-Line
Buy newest titles on-line or visit any of our 950 stores nationwide.

Blast your game to the next level with Interact's Astro Pad for Sega Dreamcast systems.

gamestop!com

FuncoLand

Gamestop

Babbage's

software ETC

Factoid: The famed Tommy Tallerico did the game's musical score, for which he employed an 80-piece orchestra in Budapest—whom he conducted via webcam over the internet. Whoa.

Evil Dead: Hail to the King

File under survival horror comedy

Sam Raimi's Evil Dead films—in all of their technical, comedic and cinematic genius—have become essential viewing for any self-respecting gamer (ProTip: when a pop-cultured gamer-type asks you whether or not you have seen Evil Dead 2, do yourself a favor and answer yes, regardless). THQ clearly recognized this reality, and promptly snatched up the videogame rights to the series.

Enter Evil Dead: Hail to the King. A survival horror game in the vein of Resident Evil and Silent Hill, HTTK attempts to combine those games' successful formula of suspense, action and puzzle-solving with the signature brand of bloodstained, over-the-top humor found in the films. The game also makes use of streaming video environments, similar in theory to those employed by Mizuguchi & Co. in Space Channel 5. While the graininess of the background video footage detracts somewhat from the experience as a whole, this relatively rare technique allows for some impressive effects (shadows, skies, etc) which simply can't be achieved with other methods. And the environments themselves mix popular Evil Dead settings with some neat new locales.

The combat system allows players to move and attack with multiple weapons simultaneously, but the control was a bit stiff and awkward in the version we played. Fully upgradable weapons—including Evil Dead staples like the axe, rifle, shotgun, and legendary chainsaw—will be available in the final version. Plus, a full inventory screen allows players to collect objects and piece them together to solve problems (we saw a scene in which Ash ripped a starter rope from a broken lawnmower and then used it to—well, we won't spoil it for you).

The plot continues the ongoing saga of Ash and the Necronomicon, with in-game cut-scenes as well as pre-rendered sequences enabling the story to unfold. The developers are incorporating "Raimi-esque" cinematic camera movements and angles to heighten the drama, and the absence of any and all load-times during gameplay should help keep things moving along at a steady clip. Set for a November release date, Hail to the King has some promise—but it certainly has a ways to go before it can even be mentioned in the same breath as classics like Resident Evil. Look for the full review next issue.

EVAN SHAMMOON

Official Dreamcast

PUBLISHER THE DEVELOPERS HUNT BEGIN
CULTS BATTLE A TWIN DREAMcast PLAYERS
ONLINE IN RELEASE DATE DECEMBER

PLUSES [+]

The cult following of the Evil Dead series will certainly dig the dark humor and gameplay.

MINUSES [-]

Early versions for DC weren't looking as sharp as they could've, but we'll wait until the final product.

BOTTOM LINE [-]

With a great license and Bruce Campbell at the plate, we're anxious to see if the final product lives up to our high expectations... stay tuned.

Sunrise on Dreamcast...it's always such a lovely sight.

Bang! Gunship Elite

What's silver, fully armed and goes "bang, bang?"

In a nice move to further diversify Dreamcast's games library, Red Storm Entertainment (mainly known for its hallmark achievements in strategic shooters on Earth) is planning to boldly go where only a small handful of developers for DC have gone: into outer space with loads of ammo. First released for PC in July, Bang! Gunship Elite received a warm welcome, but never quite found its niche, as PC gamers shied away from its action-oriented gameplay. But now, with its debut on console gearing up, we're more than ready to test out this action-flavored shooter for ourselves on the format that it was meant to be played on. Console.

With a refreshingly simple storyline revolving around a young pilot named Xaha, you find yourself ensconced in the cockpit of a spacecraft with nothing but your cannons, guns and other various weaponry to do the talking for you. Which turns out to be the only thing that detracts from the storyline—all of the fighting you'll do (against a formidable enemy fleet in the outer reaches of wonderfully high-res starry space) will most often be done on a solo basis. Like that would really happen. With this in mind, you'll have only the comfort of up to nine wonderfully implemented weapons, with which you can deliver a steady stream of rich, graphically impressive attacks that serve to separate this shooter from other similar titles on Dreamcast (like Starlancer or Armada)—you can actually see and feel the difference between weapons while you're zipping through asteroid fields or dogfighting around enemy bases. Easy on the eyes and showing off some flair for weapons physics in one fell swoop, Bang!'s 19 different missions aim to satisfy virtually any space shooter fan who owns a Dreamcast. And the action-packed gameplay promises to deliver when the game releases this winter.

FRANCISCA REYES

PUBLISHER RED STORM DEVELOPER
DAYLORD INTERACTIVE GENRE SHOOTER
PLAYERS 1 ONLINE NO. DREAMcast RELEASE NOVEMBER

While Void is the main enemy of the Magnary Whirl, you'll still have to deal with Dr. Robotnik throughout the game's mini-games and miscellaneous events.

Comic Zone

BACK IN THE DAYS OF classic Sonic, Sega paired up with Archie Comics to release what was conceived as a one-shot, four-part comic book series distributed as a free gift from Sega of America—but it soon developed a life of its own. It's still kicking.

Sonic Shuffle

You've been invited to the wildest, wackiest party in the game world

Somebody out there is finally kicking down with a bag of noisemakers and some funny little paper hats, and throwing Sega's lil' fur mascot, Sonic and his furry friends (Amy Rose, Tails, Knuckles and three others) a proper multiplayer party send-up. In much the same vein as other party games like Crash Bash (PlayStation) and Mario Party (N64), Sonic Shuffle certainly isn't the normal hedgehog fare that most Sega fans are used to—instead, it takes place in the retrofitted of card and board games.

The game is split into two different modes: Versus and Story. Both feature the same gameplay, but the Story Mode introduces players to a handful of characters that are brand-new to the Sonic universe—including an evil and mysterious villain, Void, and a beautiful Guardian Angel named Illumina.

Play happens in a world called Magnary Whirl, which is currently in danger of changing from its pleasant, pastel-colored self into something that is altogether darker and much less welcoming. This is all due to the arrival of Void, a bug-eyed stranger who has destroyed the Preciousstone that holds Magnary Whirl together. Void (drat him!) has split the gem into several different pieces, and now it's up to Sonic and his friends to put things back together and to restore order—and of course, to face off with His Voiditude in the end.

The main crux of the game takes place on any of five different game boards, which include Nature Zone and Emerald Coast. Your job is to flip through a set of cards; picking one will determine how many "spaces" you'll get to move when your turn comes up. The slots on the game board differ—some give you a set amount of gold rings, while others remove rings from your inventory. And there are plenty of other types of slots that you can land on, as well, including ones which will lead you to Mini-Events.

When you're transported into Mini-Events, you'll be faced with meeting spontaneous challenges in a whole mess of wacky sub-games. You might, for example, end up playing hot

A Brief History of [Sonic] Time

IF ALL STARTED WAY BACK IN 1990, when Sega Japan's president, Hayao Nakayama, was looking for a mascot to define Sega's new attitude in the videogames marketplace. The winner was none other than Naoto Oshimo and his designs of a deceptively small, dynamic blue hedgehog. Oshimo was subsequently asked to work with Tetsu Nishi and his team in order to bring his creation to 16-bit life on Sega's embryonic MegaDrive/Genesis. The rest, of course, is history.

This game's imaginary world, Imaginary World, contains a guardian angel of the pixel-ish ilk called Illumina. She asks Sonic and his pals to save her universe from the enemy called Vold, and the ball starts rolling and never stops.

Mini-games: who doesn't love 'em? And Sonic Shuffle has more mini-games than you can shake a festive stick at.

If you land on an Event Square, you'll be transported to a new area where you can participate in all sorts of wackiness ranging from about a mile waiting (for left) to a strange, Robotnik-induced game of tag (left). There are even more games waiting for players, including some non-interactive events and bouts of weird and wonderful trivia segments. Sonic aficionados will make a habit.

Like any other Sonic game worth its spiky blue suit, Shuffle places an emphasis on collecting rings, as well as Preciousstones. You can win rings by landing on specific squares of the gameboard or by winning different mini-games. Pull a combo on the gameboard, and you'll double your rings. But be careful—you can lose rings just as easily if you're defeated in battle (above) or if you land on a red square (top).

potato to a live bomb, or tag with three other players—or with the CPU, if you're by yourself. You might also be called upon to answer quick trivia questionnaires. No matter the context, these Mini-Events will definitely keep players engrossed through the long race for the Preciousstone—which has been expertly placed somewhere on the gameboard map.

Of course, collecting rings and playing through Mini-Events isn't all there is to do in Sonic Shuffle. If you happen to land on a Battle Square, for instance, you'll have to duke it out with any number of strange beasts—and the way in which you'll fight is vastly different from what in which battles play out in a standard action or adventure game.

First, you'll choose a card. Depending on the number on the card, you'll have a distinct advantage or disadvantage against the monster you're facing. Your foe will also have a card; and if your card's number is greater than his, you'll be able to pack a bigger punch.

Once in awhile, you might find yourself picking a card imprinted with the letter "S"—which, predictably, stands for "Special." Your character will then be able to unleash a specialized attack, which is customized for whichever character you are using. Therefore, if you pick the S card as Sonic, prepare for some serious spin-dashing to destroy your opponent.

The game board itself is also packed with surprises and pitfalls. Some areas will require you to climb to reach the next level, but only Knuckles has this ability—so you'll have to figure out another way to reach the goal if you're playing through as someone like Tails. There are also slots on the map that work as random transports, moving you to other parts of the game board.

Of course, whether you'll land closer or further from the goal is purely a matter of luck.

Visually, Sonic Shuffle looks drastically different from any of its lightning-paced predecessors, due to a little trick called cel-shading.

Like Jet Grind Radio, Sonic Shuffle sports a 2D cartoony look that works well in the game's 3D universe. The result is something that is quite fresh, and incredibly hipper than the look of a straightforward 3D game. Fans everywhere will be seeing Sonic in a whole new light, and playing with him in a whole new way. As we speak, the game is sitting on shelves just waiting for some serious play time. Look for a full review next issue. FRANCESCA REYES

Dreamcast

PAUL ZAHN IS A DEVELOPER/PRODUCER OF DREAMCAST GAMES. HE'S A FAN OF THE GAME. RELEASE DATE NOVEMBER

PLUS [-]

Good looking, long playtime, mini-game packin', multiplayer support: goodness with Sonic in it

MINUSES [-]

Load times could use some work, not Sonic's usual fast-paced fare

BOTTOM LINE [-]

Four-player fun no matter how you slice it, but will it appeal to fans of Sonic and third-party game following on Dreamcast? We'll have to wait and see how it turns out

As one of the newly announced games for Dreamcast in both the US and Japan, Charge 'N Blast seems to come out of nowhere. But its fast-paced, action-tastic gameplay cannot be denied. You'll have to hone your aiming and timing skills in order to beat down the alien infestation under a tight time limit.

It's once, twice, three times a bloodfest

FIGHTING GIANT BUGS, KILLING GIANT BUGS and flooding the city streets with the oozing green guts of giant bugs is hard work.

Thankfully, this game gives you a unique reward for all of this (to make up for the fact that Uncle Sam cuts Squad members out of full medical and dental programs)—you'll get to see your handiwork replayed at the end of each level, from a camera angle that appropriately represents the game's cinematic influences. Low-budge monster flicks ain't done; they just moved onto Dreamcast and started costing a lot more to make.

Charge 'N Blast

This just in: Outer space is still full of ugly, angry monsters hell-bent on destruction

Uhose pesky aliens. Always dropping in uninvited. What's a self-respecting earthling supposed to do, except...blast 'em!

Yeah, the premise that drives Xicat Interactive's upcoming arcade shooter, Charge 'N Blast is about as original as the latest menu item at Taco Bell—but like the Super Cheery Chili Enchirito (or whatever handy-/to they're pimping this week), it may indeed provide an experience that could be called totally new. Or at least, new to Dreamcast.

In C'NB, you'll take the role of one of three sharp-shooting mech pilots with an extreme distaste for extraterrestrials, sent in by the government to stop the latest attack in a wave of alien invasions. At first glance, you'd think this game was the perfect candidate for lightgun compatibility—but as it turns out, what we've got here is a deceptively intense blend of accuracy and timing in a traditional arcade format.

Basically, you've just got to figure out what weapon to use, when to unload it, and how on earth you're going to make it all happen before your 'energy cell' (i.e., 'time limit') hits rock bottom. The premise is simple, to be sure—but the action is anything but. After a few rounds of single-player experience, you'll be able to tell that this is much more than attempting to cash in on the seemingly endless craze surrounding giant robots and the destruction of public property. We can say this, because despite the fact that Charge 'N Blast fits this mold, it doesn't even pretend to be a 'sim'.

Love thy neighbor

WITH THE KINDER, gentler attitude of the new Millennium, the mindset of "Us Versus Them" with regard to extraterrestrials has now become as extinct as TV shows about extraterrestrials. We here at ODCM credit the mind-blowing '90s TV show ALF for breaking down the barriers.

You've got three distinct weapons (each of which can be 'charged' for increased power), a fully destructible environment that hopes your aim is better than the plot, and a whole mess of ugly space freaks who'll really set on sticking your rail gun where the sun don't shine.

Kill all the bad guys, move to the next area, lather, rinse, repeat. And when you take out the end boss, be sure to get your camera ready for the delightfully messy (as opposed to spectacularly subtle) action replay. It's to die for.

The game is darned easy on the eyes so far, and since we're looking at a pretty linear focus, we expect Charge 'N Blast to look even better by the time it releases and we slap a score on it. Check back next issue to see if our prediction holds true.

BRANDON JUDGE

PHILIPPA ALAN DEVELOPER SHIN GEMME
ARCADE SHOOTER DESIGNER JAPAN PLAYERS 2
ONLINE RELEASE DATE DECEMBER

PLUSES [+]
Simple yet addictive action for one or two players, slick monster move visuals and tons of bailing explosions!

MINUSES [-]
Extremely linear, simplistic gameplay may be too much for short attention spans.

BOTTOM LINE [-]
Arcade style shoot 'em ups are a dying breed. Hopefully, this game on Dreamcast will help to keep them from going the way of the dodo altogether.

While Bangai-O might not have the mass appeal that, say, Metropolis Street Racer may have, there's certainly a demand for old-school 2D shooters on Dreamcast. And no one does the genre better than the Japanese developer, Treasure. Filled with wacky humor (middle bottom), hardcore gamers have reason to be delighted.

Bangai-O

A DC gem from Treasure is finally heading West

At LA's recent E3 convention, there was one lone banner for a quirky shooter called Bangai-O (Bakuretsu Meiki Bangai-O in Japan), developed by an old-school master, Treasure (Gunsler Heroes, Guardian Heroes, etc.). And that's all we knew, until it was announced that Conspiracy Games was piloting the game through the localization tunnel for a December release.

Bangai-O places gamers in the cockpit of a giant mech with bombs to spare. Your job is to destroy everything onscreen that gets in the way of finishing the level. The more you blow up, the higher your "explosion meter" will rise, powering up your ultimate weapon in the form of a multi-directional blast that will eliminate most enemies within a certain radius.

Emphasis of play is on pure pure freneticism. If you're not pumping adrenaline through these 40+ stages, you're doing something wrong. Every level will tax your dexterity with the fire button, and you might even have to acquaint yourself with that soft, mushy gray matter called Your Brain in order to make real progress.

When the game releases in Japan, some US importers complained that the characters and action onscreen were too small and hard to follow—but this simply puts the focus on the visual overload of explosions that lie at the crux of the gameplay. It's the perfect holiday fix for all of you Treasure fans.

FRANCESCA REYES

Dreamcast

PUBLISHER CONSPIRACY GAMES DEVELOPER TREASURE
FRANCHISE BANGAI-O
PLAYERS 1 ONLINE NO RELEASE DATE

PLUSES (+)
Treasure does what it always does best: shooters

MINUSES (-)
Could be a niche title for fans of old-school junkies only

BOTTOM LINE (-)
A guaranteed homerun for niche gamers with its wacky character cast and solid oldschool shooter mentality. It might even put some calluses on our trigger fingers again.

"Go back to sleep: It's a flight sim—or, no, wait a minute, it can't be. It actually looks cool."

Iron Aces

Ah, World War 2: when men were men and air combat was sweet...

Forget stories about how to install a 3D card or why Linux really is the operating system of the future. There's simply nothing quite like a flight sim for putting the average console gamer to sleep. Despite the fact that the prospect of shooting down the air forces of a power-hungry country is a pretty tasty bait, the typical interface of such titles is often far too intimidating and unresponsive for most armchair flyboys to even bother trying. But Iron Aces, a somewhat over-the-top (read: B-movie cheesy) fighter pilot extravaganza, is set to shoot down this stereotype and introduce some real, console-friendly airborne action.

Set amidst the turmoil of World War 2, you're cast as a rookie pilot engaged in a small but pivotal conflict over a handful of islands in the Pacific—and of course, you get caught up in a larger plot to save the free world from certain doom. You'll do everything from routine patrolling of friendly territory to engaging in heated dogfights with the enemy.

This in-air insanity comes to us via a simple yet functional console interface, and the Dreamcast has proven itself to be quite capable of handling the action with style. Missions take place over smoothly textured backgrounds, and depending on the mission, the sky comes alive with head-to-head air combat over one of many numerous backdrops. Clouds race by and enemy planes are dispatched by cannon fire that explodes against the fading sunlight in a spectacular symphony. And if the first go 'round wasn't enough, Iron Aces also offers up a replay mode that lets you appreciate anything you might have missed while trying to keep your plane in the air in the heat of battle.

While this sort of action may not be for everyone, Iron Aces should offer up a nice war-talking for flight buffs or anyone who wants to zoom around in the great grey sky without paying for flight school. ODCM plans to hop into the cockpit soon for a full review—so be sure to check your radar for the final word in the near future.

BRANNOON JUSTICE

We're betting that Baker's onscreen message above will be pretty redundant: you'll know you've reached your destination when all kinds of enemies are suddenly shooting at you.

Tony Hawk's Pro Skater 2

The Godfather of Roll returns

With bated breath and twitchy thumbs, we shredded open the Activision-embellished FedEx package. Inside, swaddled in alluring bubble-wrap, stood one lone, defiant disc bearing the letters "T-H-P-S" etched in Sharpie across its shiny face. Was this the final build we had been so anxiously awaiting for the last six months, or just some sick prank dreamed up by Activision's PR department?

Yup, you guessed it. It was a sick prank.

The next day, however, they really did send us the final build. And ladies and germs, this is exactly what we have all been waiting for—a brilliant refinement of an already spectacular game. It looks better, it sounds better, it retains the best control in the business, and it's packed full of more secrets and hidden features than, well, Tony Hawk's Pro Skater. Yes, you need it.

Fear not though, Hawk veterans—the insanely great feel has been left intact. As in the first title, control is absolutely bang-on—this is one of the few games in which your character does exactly what you want him to do, exactly when you want him to do it. There are now far

The face that launched a thousand tricks... Tony Hawk is one of the few celebrities who's cool enough to retain the title 'cool' even after becoming a celebrity.

You know a game's good-looking when you can actually see the grooves in the character's sneaker. Okay, no you don't—but dammit, it doesn't hurt. PS: There's actually a way to play as the Amazing Spidey in THPS 2.

Tony Hawk 2's sound effects are outstanding, with a great blend of ambient noise (nearby cars, trains, skate competition announcers, etc) and high-quality sound samples. The clink of your trucks hitting a metal rail is superb—and the sounds vary with varying surfaces. We bet that the guy who produced the sound of human flesh being scraped across pavement turned his effect on some pretty painful memories. See? You can make something good out of just about anything.

MULLET GALORE

THE LIST OF PROS KNOWING THPS2's bones is impressive. Featuring returning Hawk vets such as Rocky Lockie, Justin Thomas, Elissa Steiner, and the indomitable Robb Burnquist, as well as three newcomers, Ericoston, Rodney Millen and old-schooler Steve Caballero. In addition to a slew of hidden characters, THPS2 also includes a creative skater feature, which enables you to create miles absolutely everything about your prime of suburban—from his hair style to clothing, head, tracks and skating style. It's the Tribuna Maker you don't feel ashamed to lose.

the number in the original)—and some are tougher than week-old sourdough. Rest assured, it will take you quite a bit of time and dedication to clean this baby dry (the only complaint that we could make, in fact, is that some of the game's challenges are a bit too difficult—deciphering some of the relatively vague jewel goals is often more frustrating than we would have liked.)

One of THPS2's most-bally-hooded features is its built-in skatepark editor. With more than 100 parts at your disposal—including ramps, rails, pools, funboxes and quarter pipes—the possibilities are virtually endless. And once you've created the ultimate park, you can save it to a VMU and tote it on over to a friend's house to skate it, trade it or simply stick it in his ear—whatever your heart desires. While we would have liked to see some expanded features in the DC version of the editor (read: more memory/bigger levels), it'll still steal your hours and provide you with endless replayability.

Visually, THPS2 is clearly a step ahead of its forerunner (actually, more like a hop, skip and a jump). Treyarch has gone the extra mile this time around, polishing the graphics to a glossy sheen while managing to preserve the essential grittiness that has defined the series. Environments are now far more consistent, with nary a protruding polygon or uncensored texture to be found. Every tree, streetlamp and stop sign in the environment is now a fully three-dimensional model, and skater models are far superior to those of their elders. Fabric even blows in the wind, which makes us all warm and tingly inside.

And let us not forget about the game's stellar soundtrack, which features tracks from 15 bands including Bad Religion ("You"), Chuck D with Anthrax ("Bring the Noise"), and—May their legacy live on forever—Rage Against the Machine ("Guerrilla Radio"). It's easily one of the best videogame soundtracks you'll find, and it fits like a glove.

Like the original Tony Hawk, THPS2 maintains a perfect balance between arcade- and simulation-style gameplay, allowing for the realism that skateboarding demands—and the fantasy that videogames rightfully facilitate. There is no racing involved—rather than going from point A to point B, you can go anywhere you choose, pulling off tricks and flexing your skills in a series of directed challenges. The gameplay is entrenched in the spirit of a free-roaming adventure, and the unparalleled level of freedom—combined with the best control in the biz—means that you'll be all over this baby like a cheap suit.

Enjoy. EVAN SHAMOON

Dreamcast

Score: 10

GRAPHICS 9
Cooler textures, skater models, real gravity

SOUND 10
Rage Against the Machine. Oh, and lots more

CONTROL 10
The best around. And then some

GAMEPLAY 10
More, more and more of what you love

It's 9:00 am.

December 7, 1941.

Do you know where your Sega Dreamcast is?

Fly over 80 authentic WW II airplanes.

Keep in mind that even if you do run into the enemy, you should not draw away your plane in a futile attack.

Challenge your dogfighting skills in 17 unique missions.

Realistic instrumentation puts you in control of your craft 24/7.

If you know what's good for you, soldier, you're hooked into that Sega Dreamcast defending the good ol' American Navy from the enemy's surprise attack. And if you can stop 'em there, you'll have to escort those B-29's in their definitive attack on the largest naval fleet in the Pacific. I ain't talkin' 'bout no walk in the park here, soldier; this is an all out adrenaline rush of aerial combat. WW II style. Just an Ace and his machine. Two creatures forged from burning metal, moving as one. So strap into that Sega Dreamcast, soldier, and get ready to become one of the boys; one of the Iron Aces.

IRON AGES

SEGA.NET

The Hot Rods Of

ROD

SPEEDZONE

THE SEACAT

25,994

Slip Slidin' Away

To grab those big audios, you'll need plenty of style. One of the easiest ways to improve the judges is to take a sharp turn with a perfect power-slide. Here's all you have to do:

1. Tap the footbrake (L trigger) just before you start to turn to put weight onto the front wheels.
2. Hit the handbrake (A button) as you turn.
3. When you begin to slide, wait for the car's tail to swing out from behind you.
4. Then, let go of the handbrake and apply the footbrake while turning into the slide.
5. Trust us.

3rd LAP 2 of 3

Even the storefronts are accurate in this game: we've been to Tokyo and we live in San Francisco, so we're giving London the benefit of the doubt.

WATCH OUT!

2nd LAP 2 of 3

swatch+TIMING

Fastest

28.3

Your Best

42.6

Metropolis Street Racer

Don't believe the hype: it doesn't come close to describing this game's goodness

Some things just never live up to the hype—like Star Wars Episode 1, the last Tyson fight, or the PlayStation2. But occasionally, something ramps up our expectations and then completely soars over them. Metropolis Street Racer has been idling up the Dreamcast's onramp since before the launch in '99...and now that it's finally here, we can safely say that it's the kind of masterpiece that leaves the hype squatting in the dust.

There is so much fresh thinking in MSR that we are certain that some of its features are going to become standard for future driving sims. The first thing we noticed is that the game corresponds to the time of day in all three major cities—London, Tokyo, and San Francisco—as well as to the internal clock on the Dreamcast. So, if you are playing at noon in, say, Toronto, it will be 9am in San Francisco, 5pm in London, and 1am the next day in Tokyo, exactly like in real life. How cool is that?

Even better, MSR gets closer to real life by modeling its respective cities perfectly. Since we happen to live in San Francisco, you can take our word for it that the game has recreated our fair town superbly. While it doesn't model all three cities entirely, it does feature more than 250 circuits through Whip it!

WANT TO TAKE MSR'S SHOW ON the road? Don't. Even little fender-benders can cause whiplash—the condition where the cervical vertebrae in your neck are sprained, dislocated or even fractured. Even minor whiplash can result in horribly pinched nerves that require weights added to the head or legs to stretch the muscles and ease the pain. Up! So keep the speed-limit confined to your Dreamcast, smart guy streets that look almost exactly the same on your Dreamcast as they do in real life. If you're about to make a trip through London's St. James' park, San Francisco's Pacific Heights or Tokyo's Shibuya, you'd be better off playing this game than buying a map.

Your car's radio will push you even deeper into the experience. As you drive through the cities, several fictitious radio stations give you accurate traffic and weather updates, and play the latest hits from MSR's playlist of more than 25 eclectic rock, pop, and country tunes. Don't like all the songs on the radio? Switch to the "make your own CD" mode, and select only those songs you want to hear.

Every possible attention to detail has been made, including the fact that if you drive through a tunnel, your radio will lose reception.

But all of this exacting realism comes to nothing without a good game behind it. Fortunately, the driving system in MSR is a wonderful blend of realism and fun. There are more than 40 real-world cars from 13 different manufacturers to choose from, including the Ford Mustang, Mercedes SL and Alfa Romeo Spider. While you won't have to worry about tinkering with the suspension or chassis, you will have to know how to tap the brakes to avoid understeer, and work the wheel to get out of oversteer.

There are more than 25

Ever bought a new car? You do a lot of sitting in an office, saving "Yes" to questions like "Leather upholstery?" And then someone hits some buttons on a calculator and shows you the number, and your entire lifestyle disappears suddenly into the abyss known as Your New Car. MSR is $49.99. You do the math.

Metropolis Speed Racer

FLYING THROUGH Tokyo in a Jensen S-V8 is cool enough, but when are games going to start including the coolest car of all time: the Mach 5? We can do without Sprite and Chin-Chin, but what better way is there to impress a hip chick like Yoko than to use those jumping stiltie and spinning saw blades to cut through courses in Shinjuku? Go, Speed Racer, Go!

chapters in MSR, each containing ten challenges. But winning isn't as easy as simply finishing with as fast a time as possible. The game uses a novel points system called "kudos," awarding players a certain number of kudos after each race for their performance in three categories: style, skill and handling. Your capacity to open up new tracks and cars is dependent upon your number of kudos, and not your position in the previous race; and players can get beaucoup kudos for stylishly skidding through a turn, as well as for finishing the race quickly.

Unfortunately, too much of the game is locked away. Players will have to earn three cars just to begin the first chapter, and you can only play a quick race against friends on tracks unlocked in the single-player mode. And the online component only consists of playing against other fans via ghost cars. But MSR does a brilliant job of slowly ramping up the difficulty, so even novices can enjoy all it has to offer—and it offers a lot. Amazing realism, an ingenious points system, and good old fashioned fun adds up to one of the best games we have played on the DC all year. JIM PRESTON

Dreamcast

PUBLISHERS: SEGA (DEV: SEGA) GENRE: RACING PLAYERS: 1-2 ONLINE: YES ESRB: E PRICE: $49.99

GRAPHICS 9

Planning recreation of real cities and cars

SOUND 10

Awesome mix of rock, clank, country and pop

CONTROL 8

Intuitive controls, winning style can be tough

GAMEPLAY 10

Cool points system, lots of options, tons o' fun

Score: 9

BlueSC manages to crash on take-off

Buzz Lightyear of Star Command

Buzz just can't stick the dismount

Any resemblance between the Buzz Lightyear of Buzz Lightyear of Star Command and the Buzz Lightyear from Disney's excellent animated Toy Story films is purely physical. Activision has taken the popular space hero, stolen his soul and wit, and jammed his likeness onto a 3D action platformer that's much like Toy Story, sans toys. And it's pretty much sans story, too. If by 'story' you mean something you're actually interested in finding out more about.

As the star of the eponymous Buzz Lightyear of Star Command, the iron-jawed Lightyear must race through a series of alien worlds collecting vile, flat-footing no-goodniks. A polter sort of spacecop, our hero will actually chase his foes to their get-away destination before extending (by which we mean zapping them until they collapse) his long, lawful arm. Gameplay takes place over 14 missions and nine worlds, some of which require multiple visits—giving new meaning to being there and done that.

A thinner-than-a-postcard plot is strung together by snippets from the Buzz Lightyear of Star Command cartoon. Each level presents an animated supervillain to bust and a time limit to beat; if Lightyear doesn't reach the course's end in the allotted span, it's game over, baby.

The emphasis shifts, then, from exploration and puzzle-solving to flat-out sprinting and blasting, with no time to stop and enjoy the scenery. And since scenery is so staggeringly unimpressive, this constraint is a blessing. It's just about the only time this game is going to let you off easy, so you'd better enjoy it.

Lightyear can collect credits in gameplay and then use his loot to "buy" weapon powerups, shields, jet packs, hoverboards, flying bikes, and the like. A neat idea, martyred by poor execution, in that (in a nutshell) whatever item you're buying is represented by an icon encased in a bubble that's imprinted with big fat numbers, which cover the icon inside completely—so you're never exactly sure of what you're buying until you've bought it. Hope you like surprises. Bonus levels—more sprinting and item collection—the story begins to read like a dyslexic's master's thesis. Infinity has never seemed so close (and yet so far). Recommended only for guppies or the very young.

GREG ORLANDO

Dreamcast

PUBLISHERS: SEGA (DEV: SEGA) GENRE: ACTION/ADVENTURE PLAYERS: 1-2 ONLINE: YES ESRB: E PRICE: $29.99

Score: 5

GOTTA CATCH A COELACANTH

THE COELACANTH WAS thought to have died out at the end of the Cretaceous Era, 65 million years ago, until a fisherman caught one off the tip of South Africa in 1938. It was five feet long, weighed 120 pounds, had bulging blue eyes and tasted horrible. Turns out, the coelacanth's nasty flavor was the reason why scientists had thought it was extinct: fishermen just left it alone when they saw it. And now, it's one of the star catches of SMF.

In this eleventh hour of our deadline madness, we'd really rather B: Fishing. We'd even bait our own hooks, dammit.

Sega Marine Fishing

Screw those guppies in freshwater. Baby, we're going after Jaws.

Somebody at Sega knows fishing. First they churn out 1999's Sega Bass Fishing, a game that, while a bit shallow (ha, ha), perfectly captured the near-therapeutic feel of freshwater bass angling. Now they've thrown Sega Marine Fishing into the water, an arcade-style fisherist that perfectly captures the salter, more adrenalized, man-versus-Moby Dick action that is ocean fishing. Get the Dramamine. We're heading out.

While the first game focused on the admittedly tasty Largemouth Bass, the five fishable areas in Sega Marine Fishing boast all manner of hook-able sea life, including bluefin tuna, barracuda, stingray, sailfin—even sharks. Best of all, these monsters fight. You think landing a 15-pound bass was too easy? Try dragging a 220-pound Shortfin Mako on board. Then maybe you'll be macho enough to get that anchor tattooed on your chest (Fran has repeatedly turned down this honor).

This actually leads to one of our only complaints—it really sucks that you can't adjust your pole's drag or earn stronger fishing line, as bigger fish (particularly the sailfin) can snap your line a bit too easily just by turning on the afterburners. Players who're uninterested in a greater challenge (or who are too cheap to shell out for Sega's to-die-for fishing controller) will find the big boys much easier to reel in using a standard controller.

There are game modes a-plenty. Arcade mode is fully intact, with newly adjustable difficulty, and five mini-games enable you to practice techniques like casting and lure action. Then comes the self-explanatory Free

A reel big fish story

FISH AIN'T HELPFUL. Consider the story of Jose Rojas Majorita, a 39-year-old fisherman who was speared by a 10-foot-long marlin. Once hooked, it lapped into his boat and drove its aluminum nose directly through the poor guy's abdomen. Jose then drifted for two days before being rescued by a passing vessel. Kids, regard this as a lesson: fish play for keeps.

Fishing mode. Success in these exercises will unlock bonus items, many of which are then displayed in Aquarium mode... which is literally a gigantic aquarium. There are over 260 bonus items, including fish, aquarium decorations, new lures, clothes, different music, and even a dog (every game could use a bit with a dog).

Here's the only problem: this good stuff replaces the first game's tournament-style Original mode. Earning new items is fun, but it doesn't assuage that competitive urge. Thus, the game's arcade mode is severely exposed, and although Sega plans to offer limited online support for the game (items can be downloaded; you can enter catches in month-long competitions), its ultimate longevity suffers accordingly.

ERIC BRATCHER

Want to test the waters in Sega Marine Fishing? It's no exclusive on this month's ODM Demo Disc. Check out the Disc Guide on page 6 for disc packaging for more details.

Category: Marathon

Dreamcast

FOR SEGA DEV ONLY: GENRE: ACTION SCORE: 80/100
MINI-PLAYS: 1 ONLINE: YES POURING: 1/10
RECORDING: 1/10 ESR: C PRICE: $39.99

GRAPHICS: 8
 It's not quite F100, but it's still demo pretty

SOUND: 6
 Good music, but splashes and reel sounds

CONTROL: 8
 Tastes like the good, but realistic with the pole

GAMEPLAY: 8
 Incredibly fun, but stymie in the long run

Score: 7

Let them all say it: hovercrafters are as much used and accounted for in Infogrames' shockingly good licensed kart racer. Real values back up every anvil-dropping moment of every race, so do yourself a favor and check it out.

"The Asteroid Belt"

"OFF WORLD CITY LIMIT"

With its super savvy presentation and authentic visual feel, Looney Tunes will have you getting in touch with your inner Saturday evening cartoon child fast.

Looney Tunes: Space Race

NewsFlash: Licensed cart racer stuns world in good game shocker!

Allow us to be frank for a moment: When a new kart racing game rolls into the office—especially one of the cutesy-licensed persuasion—we tend to hide under our desks and go into uncontrollable, Exorcist-style spasms. Those are the most derivative games in the world, right? But not this time.

In racing terms with which we can all identify, Space Race is like a cross between two of the genre's finest—namely, Mario Kart and WipeOut. Vehicles are of the hovercraft(ian) variety, and courses are filled with steep inclines, huge jumps and mammoth, elevated arching turns—all distinctly reminiscent of Psygnosis' classic. These tracks are littered with an assortment of weapons, ranging from spring action boxing gloves to falling anvil remote controls, which provide something to do while speeding around the track.

One aspect of Space Race

which may bother some gamers is its built-in equalizer. Due to an especially hefty helping of "computer assistance", every racer is always within striking distance of his or her opponents, which allows for extremely tight races on almost every run. While this certainly keeps things interesting, it also induces a great deal of frustration: Race a perfect lap and everybody's right on your tail; fall off of the track five times and you're still in the thick of it. This fortuitousness may frustrate.

What's Down Under, Doc?

From the land that brought us Yahoo Serious, the Crocodile Hunter (and Crocodile Dundee) and wergame sandwich has come developer Melbourne House and two rather stellar games: Yeast Drive, Le Mans and Looney Tunes: Space Race. One of Infogrames' latest acquisitions, M&H's potential is pretty stellar if these two games are any measure of it. We can't wait to see what else they cook up.

Graphically, the game uses a clever derivative of the cel-shaded technique popularized by Jet Grind Radio. The illustration, animation and pastel color palette come together to create what is literally a perfect match for the real thing—frame-for-frame, this is classic Chuck Jones, Hanna-Barbera goodness. The interface is polished, and the loading screens look like wonderful animation cells (although they do remain onscreen a bit too long).

Space Race is irresistibly addictive, and the nostalgia it induces makes us grin like the idiots we are. Numerous extras and special challenges give the game plenty of replay value, and the split-screen, four-way racing is hella fun. Melbourne House gets kudos for making this game a thousand times better than it should have been. EVAN SHAMMOON

Dreamcast

PUBLISHERS: INFOGRAVES & DEVELOPER: M&H
SCIENCE: HOUSE OF SEVEN DOLLARS PLAYERS: 1-8 ONLINE: NO

GRAPHICS 8
Melbourne's Tokyo style cel shading

SOUND 8
Great Looney Tunes samples, we wanted more

CONTROL 8
Near perfect, we don't like falling at times

GAMEPLAY 8
Anything but very frustrating at times

Score: 8

As if to make for the ultimate dilemma of SNK in the US, Capcom has come out swinging with the ultimate crossover dream for fightin' fans.

Fight to the Top

AT THE START OF Capcom vs. SNK, characters are lined up in three tiers for your perusal—with strong fighters on the bottom, and weak ones on top. The tier that you select your first fighter from will determine (and limit) your options for further selections. Cool idea.

Pitting a classic SNK character against a Street Fighter bruiser is a dream come true

Capcom vs. SNK

It's the Mets vs. Yankees all over again, only without the hot dogs

Uhe ultimate fighting game that all hardcore fans of Capcom and SNK have prayed for is here. And everything that has always made Capcom's fighters so successful—great control, pretty graphics, personality, and combo-tastiness—has been used to its best advantage. Sort of.

Characters come equipped with an average amount of moves, a couple of supers, and a decent number of combos. However, Capcom has further enhanced gameplay with a few minor innovative features. First, players can choose between a SNK or Capcom style super; SNK supers are powered up by holding down three buttons.

Second, character teams are constructed in a very unique manner. Characters are divided into three tiers: bosses, strong characters and weak characters. If players choose a boss, then they must also pick a weak character. If you go with a fair to middling character, then you can either add one more average character or two more weak ones. This system promotes unique fighting strategies without sacrificing the game's overall balance. Although it's not perfect, the idea is interesting and it would be cool if it was taken even a little further.

Unfortunately, these are pretty much the only shiny bits. The fighting interface is very basic, a step back from even Alpha 3. There aren't any countermoves; combos, while present, seem to consist mostly of simple two-in-ones; air blocking and air throws are gone.

Also, the SNK characters have been simplified—their moves list has been reduced and their chain combos are missing. Since the fighting system is a bit shallow, if you don't have a friend to play with, you may get bored too quickly.

One cure for boredom is a great storyline. But unfortunately, this game says, "Nah. Be a man. Boredom makes you stronger." Even some attempt at a cohesive story would have been nice; Capcom could've created a plot based on several teams, like in the KOF series. But no.

On the cool side, stuff like a secrets purchasing system, similar to the one in Marvel vs. Capcom 2, have apparently been added to make up the difference. You'll love being able to buy everything from extra stages to secret characters—as long as your interest is still being held.

Within its own limits, Capcom vs. SNK is a solid title. There are plenty of fans who'll surely drool over the idea of pitting their favorites from both publishers against each other. But, next time, we're hoping to see some radical innovation. CHET BARBER

Capcom vs. SNK
Dreamcast

Full-time Capcom and SNK
playable characters
SNK PLAYERS: 1. JINPAI (2000)
SNK TO SNK (2000) (2000)

GRAPHICS 7

Good-looking art; characters are a bit pixelated

SOUND 7

Good soundtrack with loads of nice touches

CONTROL 6

Good control; some stages, a bit too shallow

GAMEPLAY 7

Too pared down in terms of moves and depth

Score: 7

ULTIMATE FIGHTING CHAMPIONSHIP™

"Score: 9 out of 10 -

For a truly realistic martial arts game, this one's a knockout."

- ODM

"5 out of 5 stars - Revolutionary!"

- Next Generation

DC UFC Ranked #1 Title at Launch*

- NPD TRST Weekly Data

"Crave scores a knock-out: 'Direct Hit' Rating Easily the most realistic, and definitely one of the most fun fighting games to ever come along."

- DailyRadar.com

"UFC is a great game that could easily stand on it's own merits without this fantastic license."

- Game Fan

"UFC is poised to set the next standard in the fighting genre."

- GamePro

"90 out of 100: The best American-published fighting game in years."

- Game Fan

"The ebb and flow of ground grappling makes for something like a brutal chess match..."

- DailyRadar.com

"We might be looking at Fighting Game of the Year here."

- GameIndustry.com

Dreamcast

© 2000 Crave Entertainment, Inc. All rights reserved. Ultimate Fighting Championship and the Ultimate Fighting Championship logo are either trademarks or registered trademarks of Semaphore Entertainment Group in the U.S. and other countries. Crave and the Crave logo are either trademarks or registered trademarks of Crave Entertainment, Inc. in the U.S. and other countries. Sega, Dreamcast and the Dreamcast logo are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Sega Enterprises, Ltd. in Japan, North America, Europe, and elsewhere. Nintendo, Game Boy Color and the Game Boy Color logo are trademarks of Nintendo of America, Inc. © 1999, 1998 Nintendo of America, Inc. All other trademarks and copyright are the property of their respective holders.

Yeah, StarLancer really does look that good. StarLancer is one of the finest PC ports we have ever seen—by far.

StarLancer

Playing StarLancer is just about the closest we've ever come to piloting an X-wing fighter and saving the universe from the evil empire. Aside from that time that Fran hijacked an X-wing fighter and saved the universe from the evil empire.

Like so many enemies on the wrong end of a laser gun, this game is blowin' up!

As you jump into hyper space on your way back to mission control, after one of the most intense dogfights of your young career, you can't help but feel a little embarrassed about letting out an emphatic "yeeehaw!" as you wave bye-bye to the wreckage of countless foes and anything else that's slower than the speed of light. But ease up, rookie. If you're going to stick with the Fighting 45th Division in one of the most turbulent wars ever waged in the known universe, you're going have to do much more than yell.

After stumbling onto a stage that's as inviting as the one set above, one would hope that Crave was as wise in their Dreamcast translation as they were in the acquisition of Digital Anvil's highly under-appreciated shooter, StarLancer. As we have all (sadly) witnessed in the past, many things can go wrong when a game makes the transition from PC to Sega's little white box, and with a visually loaded, input-heavy title like this—which also features online play—you'd be crazy not to be a little skeptical as to whether or not Warthog could make it happen.

Well, ODCM has hopped behind the cockpit. And from where we're sitting, Crave has not only managed to move up the ranks in the Sega army, but has singlehandedly raised the bar for console space shooters on the whole.

What a show. For just a few minutes, try to forget that the game is absolutely gorgeous. Never mind that the presentation is incredibly engrossing. And try really hard to put it out of your head that this game controls like a dream. What will really knock you for a loop is that the game does all of these things in a convincingly brilliant fashion AND it does them online!

Pretty incredible, eh? Now, forget we told you to forget all of those things, and let's talk about the game's look. If you thought Paygnosis made a name for itself during the early years of that 'other console's' lifecycle with a flashy shooter called Cobry

Log In, Lock On, and Launch Away!

SUPPORTING UP TO SIX ACK starfighters, StarLancer doesn't play around when it comes to Internet action. Not really feeling like a standard dogfight? How 'bout a blast session in a crowded asteroid field? Or maybe a little game of Nuclear Threat, where any pilot can trigger a blast that will destroy every other ship? Or perhaps a little hunt the Shadow—a cloaked version of "tag" where missiles are your high tech slap on the back. Just naming a few games here, folks. StarLancer has plenty more where that came from.

Deathmatch

Game Name: StarLancer
Category: Ship
Players: 1-8
Platform: PC

Game Type: Asteroid Arena
Targeting: Off
Play: Off
Start Game

A one-fits-all arena set in a dense pocket of asteroids, the only rule is survival of the fittest.

Players: 1-8
Ping: 1-8
Players: 1-8
Ping: 1-8
Start Game

When ON, turrets will fire on the players

As the saying goes, in space, no one can hear you scream. Apparently, no one in space can take a decent screenshot either, as the black, blurry sides of outer space do look amazing onscreen but turn out to be quite boring on the printed page. So don't be fooled. StarLancer is actually a great-looking game—whether you're cruising through empty hangars to dodging lasers near a flaming sun, you can see that a lot of thought and time went into the DC conversion.

It's comin' right at you! We have yet to see a more immersive space shooter. If you're looking for an excellent Star Wars game for Dreamcast—and what you're interested in is the lightning-speed space combat, not the music or Jar Jar Binks—then by all means, pick up a copy of StarLancer.

Rank Has Its Privileges

SEE THAT SHIP, RECRUIT? Well, don't stare too long, because you won't see the cockpit of a vessel like that until you've logged some serious hours in the line of duty. As you progress through the game, you can earn better ships by moving up in the ranks via proving your worth as the Alliance in battle. Fail to perform, however, and watch the game take one of its many paths to your damnable, i.e., doom.

Wars, just wait till you see StarLancer in motion. Sporting a sturdy 30fps framerate, incredible models and lighting effects, and texture work that occasionally eclipses even its comparably more powerful PC forefathers, and what you've got here is a game that will really knock your socks off.

While it's all well and good that your ship looks nice, I'm sure you're wondering how it handles. Well, for a game that had to drop down from a keyboard to the Dreamcast's eleven total buttons, we're in shock that we can still barrel roll, lock-on, and reverse thrusters with the best of 'em. StarLancer controls like a dream, and when you launch your countermeasures, slam the breaks and blow that bogey into kingdom come, be sure to salute the crew at Warthog for making it all possible, because this is definitely no small accomplishment.

But even more impressive is the fact that StarLancer will undoubtedly become a showpiece for SegaNet faster than you can unleash a Panther missile on a locked target, thanks to the game's phenomenal set of Internet options. Not only is this the first online title that will offer support for up to six pilots (two more than the PC version, for those of you who are keeping score), but it does so in a wide variety of creative team and free-for-all modes. The underestimated power of the Dreamcast's 56k connection shines through once again, as play is extremely smooth. And thanks to tons of game types, this title could very well give even Quake 3 Arena a run for its money in the replay value department. Now, that would be something.

One edge that this shooter has over id's fps masterpiece and other titles in the space shooter niche is that the single-player experience is an equally compelling black hole of productivity from nearly every angle. Challenging, tense missions, over 6,000 lines of commentary from both friends and foes, and cool briefings will pull you through the kind of script plot that would make any Trekkie melt.

It's just the kind of experience that makes you thrilled to own a Dreamcast. If you're wondering why console shooters can't be as good as Wing Commander was on your PC, then prepare to sweep out such notions with questions as to why more games like StarLancer don't come our way. Between excellent single-player action and the most robust online multiplayer experience we've seen on the system to date, picking this one up is a no-brainer.

BRANDON JUSTICE

Official Dreamcast Magazine

FOR CREDITS, DVD, DIGITAL, ANAL, WATCHED, SEVERE SPACE SHOOTER, DREAM PLAYERS, & ONLINE KILLS, YOUR OWN PRIDE PAGE IS HERE

GRAPHICS 8
Some sluggish moments, but still sinking

SOUND 9
I will be every. ARRRRRR!

CONTROL 9
How did they do it? Controls like a dream!

GAMEPLAY 9
Challenging, deep, and addictive

Score: 9

PICK YOUR POISON

ONE OF THE BEST things about Samba is the amount of control that you have over how out of control the game gets. You can choose the music that you prefer to gyrate to, the level of difficulty you'd like to play at (which varies from pretty-darn-hard to you've-GOT-to-be-bloody-joking) and—very important!—your height, so the game knows how to score you.

The cut-scenes are executed seamlessly using the in-game engine. The story isn't half-bad, either.

Sonic Team couldn't be further from Samba, but they still manage to hit the mark with one of the freshest, funniest DC games yet.

Samba de Amigo

Two men. Four maracas. One legendary game

Samba de Amigo is unique. While it's easy to quantify the gameplay, the game experience itself almost defies description. It boils down to this: one or two guys standing on a rubber mat and shaking a pair of maracas at an animated monkey on TV. While it sounds rather strange (and honestly, it looks that way too), Samba de Amigo is one of the freshest game experiences you'll find on your Dreamcast this winter—and it's certainly one of the most fun.

A great big key to this game's ultimate success is its very low barrier of entry combined with its substantial amount of game-play depth. The maracas are a great equalizer, and everybody (yes, even you) can figure out how to use them in just a minute or two. All you have to do is synch up your rattling with both musical and onscreen cues: shaking to the right or left at the up, middle or down positions in time with some little blue dots on the screen (for all practical purposes, ignore the monkey—he's really just psychedelic window dressing).

Now, once you've caught the Samba bug (which usually happens after only one game), you'll no doubt want to see all it's got to offer. And surprisingly, despite the simplicity of the premise, there's a quite a lot there. Besides an arcade mode, an original mode (the difference being in the amount of songs you have available to select) and a versus mode, there is a challenge mode in which you compete in ever more difficult fracciones to unlock more songs (there are only six initially). And if this still isn't enough music to float your boat, an internet mode enables you to download even more songs.

Shake your money maker!

WITH ONLY 10,000 MARACAS on the market, gamers may be hard pressed to find a pair to shake with any of the 50,000 copies of Samba being released. But maracas-less amigos should fear not: after playtesting the game with the controller, we conclude that the controller may not be as cool, but it's still good.

This is one of those rare games that's very nearly as much fun to watch as it is to play. When the game is set up in the office, not only do gamers get involved, but everybody that passes by stops to watch and usually takes a turn. Samba is also (clearly) the ultimate party game—enabling you to prove not only that videogames are awesome, but that gamers (thanks to practice) look way cooler than stock brokers, doctors and lawyers do when they're shaking maracas in time with Chumba-umba's "Tub Thumping."

If you're still skeptical after reading this review, we room-mend that you try the game yourself. We'll save you a seat on the bandwagon.

BLAKE FISCHER

Dreamcast

PUBLISHER: NINTENDO DEVELOPER: NINTENDO

GENRE: PARTY ONLINE (UP TO 16 PLAYERS) 2 ONLINE

TO PLAY: FREE (IN THE WHOLE WORLD)

GRAPHICS 9

It's an easy trip with a cheeky monkey

SOUND 9

Music is more infectious than that good ol' Gbade

CONTROL 10

Maracas! Maracas! Maracas!

GAMEPLAY 9

It's unique as addictive as any game we've seen

Score: 9

SONY 36" WEGA
FLAT SCREEN

SEGA DREAMCAST

AND ALL THE GAMES TO KEEP THE HOLIDAYS FROM SUCKING.

BEST BUY

Turn On the Fun™

Looks good, huh? Some of the events are even pretty fun. Unfortunately, like pudding in the sun, it all somehow fails to jell, gameplaywise

X-treme Sports

Je ne sais quoi (that's French)

Like bread without butter, chow fun sans MSG, or the Miami Sound Machine without Gloria Estefan, something is simply missing from Infogrames' X-treme Games (besides the E). If one looks at the individual elements here—pretty graphics, varied styles of gameplay, an excellent soundtrack and very passable control—it might seem like an excellent title. Unfortunately, that entirely overused adage about “the whole” and the relative deficiency of “the sum of its parts” is all too applicable.

Players compete in six distinctly different events, including mountain biking, sky surfing, ATV riding, hang gliding, snowboarding and bungee jumping. Each course is loaded with three distinct events, all of which are strung together in triathlon-style progression. On one course, for example, players head down the slopes on their snowboard (passing time checkpoints and pulling tricks along the way), and then at the end of the run break free from their board, strap into a hang glider, and take off into the air. When you finally land the thing, you're back on the ground—where you hop onto your ATV for the final leg of the course. Only three courses are available at the start, but more are unlocked as you play the game.

Perhaps one of the problems is that the game attempts to cover a bit too much ground, and thereby spreads itself too thin. The control is uneven at best, and it's far too easy to get hung up on walls, stuck on hills, etc., etc. And while the graphics are quite nice on the whole—even stunning at times—they suffer from some ugly polygon glitching, due mostly to buggy texture-swapping and environment warping. The soundtrack is excellent, fortunately, and includes exclusively Ninja Tune cuts, with Armon Tobin, DJ Food, Mr. Scruff, Cold Cut and others providing audio accompaniment.

X-treme Sports looks nice, sounds nice, plays nice—hell, its packaging even smells nice—but in the end, the game can neither climb, skate, bike or hang glide above the level of mediocrity. Uneven gameplay and sometimes clunky control mar what could have been an “extremely” solid title.

EVAN SHAMON

Official Magazine
Dreamcast
PUBLISHED BY INTERACTIVE DEVELOPERS
LEADER BOARD: X-TREME SPORTS: DREAM
PLAYERS: 1 (WIN) CREDIT: 1 ONLINE: 10 (FREE)
PRICE: $39.99
Score: 5

RIPPERDAH.

In order to fully enjoy Quake III: Arena, ODCH strongly suggests that games run out and purchase a DC mouse and keyboard. While the extra hardware will cost you a few extra bucks, please do yourselves the favor and take the plunge. It makes playing the game an entirely different experience, and you'll be able to use it with plenty of upcoming titles. Don't make us have to tell you again.

Quake III: Arena

Directions: Run, Shoot, Kill. Repeat if necessary.

It's hard not to get excited about Quake III for Dreamcast. This is, after all, arguably the best first-person shooter of all time, and it's also the first to arrive on Dreamcast. Ported over to the console by id software's choice developer, Raster, it represents a first for online, console deathmatch-style warfare. And despite all the hype that was generated about Quake III: Arena for Dreamcast—and despite all the disappointment that huge hype normally breeds—we're pleased to say that this game delivers on nearly everything it promised.

The first thing evident in QIII is just how incredible it looks. Raster has done a spectacular job with the port, and everything from the sharp character models to the abundant special effects wizardry has been translated with gusto.

Playing the game on a monitor, one would be seriously hard-pressed to tell the game from its PC counterpart. No small feat, that, especially when one considers the price difference between a Dreamcast and a comparable 3D-accelerated PC (read: $150 vs $1500).

In single-player mode, gamers choose between five difficulty levels, and must battle in a series of arenas against single and multiple opponents who get increasingly more difficult as the player progresses.

It's inevitable that you'll tire of playing against bots, however, when the temptation of fragging living, breathing opponents from all over the world is but a click away. Let's not kid ourselves, folks: While it has received wide acclaim for its innovative engine and its breakneck pace, you don't play Quake to hear stories and make believe—you play to frag your friends.

And so it was with some apprehension that we first went online with QIII. We knew that the online play might make or break the game and, being fans of the genre, we really wanted this one to shine. We were able to go from a cold Dreamcast to the bullet-riddled arenas of QIII in less than three minutes, and with over 500 QIII servers on SegaNet, there's no lack of competition. So how was it? Bloody great.

Most significantly, QIII delivers the intense action that has addicted an entire population of gamers. Those well-versed in first-person shooters will testify that stepping into a Quake arena is to step into the most intense, fast-paced deathmatches in

This shot from the replay mode shows off the lighting effects in the game: they're particularly striking at dusk.

Da details

Sometimes it's the details that put a game over the top, and here's a good example from Le Mans. At one point we kept hearing multiple engine noises, even when we were alone on the track. "That blows!" we thought. It was always at one point in the track, but inconsistent. Then it hit us: when we went under an overpass, we could actually hear (but not see, of course) the engine noises of the cars that happened to be above us. Now, that's attention to detail.

Test Drive Le Mans

Forget every crappy game you've seen under the TD franchise. This is the real deal.

U here are some classic games, like Tony Hawk 2, that you'll wait for—desperately—for months. But once in a while, a great game sneaks up on you with no fanfare at all. That's Le Mans. The game features the cars and track from the famous 24-hour long race at Le Mans, with 40 cars in two classes—GT (Porsche and Vipers) and prototype (cool-looking super-cars). You can traverse the Le Mans track in several time-compressed versions of the race (10 and 30 minutes, or one and six hours), but obviously the real challenge—and reward—is in racing through the whole 24 hours (don't worry, you can save during pit stops if you don't have the hardcore cajones to race the entire 24 hour race in one marathon sitting.)

Now, that's all cool, but there have been plenty of Le Mans games in the past. What makes this one special? Practically everything. First, there are a huge number of racing modes: not only is there the Le Mans track, but you can race in several championship series, from amateur GT all the way up to prototypes, across ten tracks.

Second, the game is simply breath-takingly beautiful. Cars are rendered brilliantly (although the reflection mapping may be too reflective for some people); the tracks are incredibly detailed, with tons of 3D trackside features (from grandstands to houses to cranes) backed by seamless 2D backdrops. The result: one of the most consistent and immersive visual effects we've ever seen in a racing game.

The track textures in particular deserve special mention: they're superb, as are the rain and lighting effects. And even with 24 cars onscreen at once, there's absolutely no slowdown.

The AI is stunning. Unlike the average, preprogrammed, "drive-this-line-perfectly-in-a-pack-for-the-entire-race" AI found in most racing games, the cars in Le

This screenshot progression shows how the game handles day-to-night cycles during the 24-hour race. Note the changes in the Ferris wheel from the first to the last screens, the lighting effects, and the longer shadows at dusk. Of course, the shadows go the other way at dawn. Not shown (but in the game) is a nearly full moon. The gradual change is amazing in realtime mode.

Car models are incredibly detailed. Normally we don't go in for replay modes, but these replays are just awesome. Put the bump-and-grind driving style you'll find in plenty of its replays may not be 100% faithful to the real Le Mans race, but it does make for some wicked fun gameplay.

Mans actually act like they have human drivers. Each car has its own individual AI, and you'll often see two AI cars jockeying and fighting for position like real drivers. AI cars also make the same mistakes you do (going wide in turns sometimes, etc.), and have to pit for gas and tires—so it feels just like you're racing against real people (of course, if you really do want to race against real people, Le Mans supports up to four players).

Most important is the racing itself. If you've ever been lucky enough to take a road racing class—you know, like a Skip Barber thing—you know that when you go around a curve at high speed, you can feel how close you are to losing it. Unfortunately, your average "sim" game gives absolutely no sense of road feel. One second you're turning, the next you're spinning out of control. (Gran Turismo on PlayStation is a particularly egregious example.) Le Mans may be the best attempt ever to deliver that road feel. Tiny cues—sounds, the back of your car slipping slightly, a barely perceptible decrease in control—let you know just where the edge is.

And this is where the game gets really, really good. See, the location of the edge changes with every lap. As new tires warm, they grip better. As they wear, lap after lap, they grip worse. And of course, as the amount of fuel in your car decreases, your car handles differently. The changes are slight and gradual, but it means that you can't just find the perfect line and keep running it.

You need to constantly adjust how you approach each turn. It's subtle, and after a few laps it's instinctual—but it always keeps you on your toes, lap after lap, hour after hour. If you stop paying attention, you will screw up. Add the fact that if you mess up a turn in Le Mans, with its 8.5 mile track, it'll be about three and a half minutes before you even get to see it again, and you've got a game that simply does not get boring.

This is crucial. In most racing games you only race each track for three or four laps. In Le Mans, you can race the Championship tracks for five, ten or more laps depending on the class, and of course, you race Le Mans for hundreds of laps. In your average racing game, this would quickly become mind-numbingly boring. But in Le Mans, it always remains interesting. No matter how many laps you've run, you've still got to think at nearly every turn. And while the game isn't super-simmy—you can only adjust tires and wing position—it delivers the incredible feel of being in a big race, where concentration is constantly required, and physical exhaustion could be right around the next corner. This is one of those games where you sit down for a quick race before bed at 11pm, and when you look up for the first time the clock reads 4am.

The only negative things we can say about the game is that there's no online play, we didn't like the music very much (although the sound effects are top-notch), and the interface is nothing special. Overall, though, we'd have to call this game an absolute triumph—it's very likely the best pure racing game available on Dreamcast.

The four player mode (left) is extremely fast, but it sacrifices the other 20 cars on the track. Racing in the solo mode (right), but requires changing lines to avoid spin-outs. By the by, the rain effect is the best we've ever seen in a racing game (or any other game for that matter)—the angle of the rain changes depending on your speed.

CHRIS CHARLA

Official Magazine

Dreamcast

DEVELOPER: SEGA
 ARTIST: SEGA
 ONLINE: YES
 PRICE: $44.99

GRAPHICS 10
Very impressive looking

SOUND 8
Good FX, little techno music

CONTROL 10
Every racing game should control like this

GAMEPLAY 9
Awesome tracks, great AI

Score: 9

Lighting effects in this game are lovely... They'll draw you in, until you go flying for half a mile and land under better control than a 747 piloted by Han Solo himself.

4x4 Evolution

A fun ride, despite a few bumps... It woulda made a nice beer commercial

Uhe dreaded compromise. Without it, things rarely get accomplished, but because of it, the end result is usually a watered-down version of what might have been. So is the case with 4x4 Evolution, the new off-road racing game from Terminal Reality. Unfortunately, the decision to go with fully licensed vehicles came with the caveat of not being able to visually represent damage onscreen. It's not disastrous to gameplay, but it forces us to question the believability of what we're experiencing: the worst thing that can happen when playing a game.

Up until you get into a bad fender-bender or a head-on collision with a track-side obstacle, 4x4 does a great job of suspending our disbelief. Pick a high-tonnage vehicle from one of the major manufacturers and take it out for a spin on one of the 16 nicely rendered tracks... And for a while, you'll get to know what it's like to cruise around in one of these off-road rascals. For the most part, the physics modeling is superb, conveying just the right amount of speed and shock action to convince you're wrestling with the actual vehicle.

Where things start to go off course is when you catch a lot of air or run into something. Landing after a long flight over the terrain is no more bone-rattling than the effect you get from hitting a small mogul. Hitting a large tree or a tiny checkpoint marker will bring you to the same abrupt stop. Then there are large bits of shrubbery which look like they ought to be a problem when you run into them, but turn out to be ethereal...all in all, the inconsistency of course features is very disturbing.

Although damage isn't physically shown, the wear and tear is supposed to have an effect on your vehicle. If so, it's very subtle: after many football-field-length flights and crash landings, we noticed very little change in our vehicles' handling.

4x4 is a pretty game, with a good physics model below the surface and plenty of options to keep you busy while the artificial intelligence of the CPU drivers offers a decent challenge. Sadly, the lack of damage modeling and odd object properties may turn you off, if you can live with them though, the solid play and online abilities (see boxout) make for a good time. ROB SMOLKA

Online Offroading

THE ULTIMATE ACCESSORY for racing fans would be a head-to-head online mode, and 4x4 Evolution's got one. Using GameSpy for registration, you can race competitively against up to three other players on Macs, PCs, or fellow DCs. Once you get your 4x4 on the track, solid fragments and minimal lag ensue. If you play online, tick another point or so to the score.

FOR THE BEST TECHNICAL REALITY, SEE OUR BOXOUT

PLAYERS: 1-8
WHEEL: 1-8
WHEEL: 1-8
WHEEL: 1-8

GRAPHICS 7
Smooth framerate, nice features, pretty cars

SOUND 6
Weather here, not there, nothing great or awful

CONTROL 6
A lot of fun, but a nice physics model

GAMEPLAY 5
With online play, it's a shame there's no online racing

Score: 6

Skywalker Raunch

ONE MUST recognize "Weird" Al Yankovic as the master of the Star Wars parody song. His seminal classic "Yoda" tells the story of Luke Skywalker's trip to Dagobah as sung to the tune of the Kinks' transsexual opus "Lola"—and contains such easily comic lines as, "I met him a swamp down in Dagobah, where it bubbles all the time like a giant carbonated soda." Al also reworded Don McLean's sprawling "American Pie" to include lyrics related to The Phantom Menace inappropriately titled "The Saga Begins." Is it a pure comedy gold.

Star Wars: Demolition

The day the demolition derby went to Dagobah

Star Wars car wars come courtesy of Luxoflux, the maker of the pretty but flawed Vigilante 8. In fact, Demolition is Vigilante 8, in a county far smash-up derby done with the Force, a strange combination that almost soars above its failings.

Disregard demolition's plot; the game's creators needed intro text to scroll across the screen and scraped together some dreck. The most here consists of balls-to-the-wall shoot-'em-ups on settings plucked from the four Star Wars movies. Players can opt to hop into a X34 Landspeeder (which never did make it into Toshie Station in Star Wars) or onto the back of a killer Rancor—or even rocket through the game's killing zones with the enigmatic bounty hunter Boba Fett. The game affords an excellent selection of powerful cruising units, and each one has been tuned to exhibit unique offensive and defensive characteristics. Popular locales have been added to the mix, further juicing the recognition factor.

Environments hold much beauty and plenty of surprises. The ice-choked Hoth features a plodding AT-AT tank which will snipe at any nearby craft, plus a vicious boulder-hurling Wampa.

Sadly, this game lives and dies in the manner of Vigilante 8. Four-player fun just doesn't Players of Demolition Racer can utilize turrets and their various perils to great effect—on Naboo, for instance, ships can push huge statues into a foe's path in order to cause him heavy damage. It's even possible to recreate Boba Fett's grisly death in Return of the Jedi by hurling the bounty hunter close to the great Sarlac on the Tatooine Dune Sea stage.

stack up against touchy control, draw-in, and collision problems. It's hard to tell the wreckage from the wonder. GREG ORLANDO

Dreamcast

FOR ACTION/ADVENTURE/ARTS/DRIVE/SPORTS/STRATEGY/SHOOTER/COMBAT/PLAYERS 1-4
ONLINE NO CODE 1 PRICE $29.95 1999/05/12

GRAPHICS 8
Loveless went the extra lightyear: looks pretty in Vigilante 8's mix.

SOUND 7
Star Wars music blares throughout.

CONTROL 5
Responding your hand it was to control the cars in Vigilante 8's mix.

GAMEPLAY 6
It's Vigilante 8 with the Force.

Score: 6

We want to know the name of this game's doctor. We'd like to give him a call if we ever need a facilitator.

Frogger 2

Believe it or not, this resurrected classic has legs.

Uhey ruined Pong. They killed Centipede. We assumed that the latest remake of Frogger would be just another attempt to cash in on a legacy, with gameplay taking a distant second place. But, eternal optimists that we are, we popped in Frogger 2: Swampy's Revenge, hoping and hoping that the hopping and hopping wouldn't be quite as evil this time around.

It was almost like the disc itself was looking up at us as we got ready to close the Dreamcast's lid, quietly pleading its case—promising that the second next-generation installment of the not-so-mean green machine wasn't so bad, after all. The odd part is, if that little disc was talking to us (and it seemed like it was at the time, but we'd been drinking a lot of Mountain Dew), he was right.

The thing is, as much fun as the arcade classic was in its prime, there's only so much you can do with the format. Hop. Dodge a vehicle. Hop some more. And oh yeah, look out for the crocodile. Been there, done that, right? Wrong, folks. Not only does Swampy's Revenge test Dreamcast users to a fast, surprisingly well-controlled engine, but incredible level design that shows some of the best environments 2.5D platforming has ever seen. There's a lot more to see and do this go 'round, and it is evident that a great deal of time was put into making this game much more than just a graphical upgrade. It's enough to make the first game green with envy. (Sorry.)

Granted, one of Frogger 2's biggest problems is that, despite new obstacles like crazy giant beetles and evil lawnmowers, the basic thrust of the game is still the same: Hop fast, hop well, and for heaven's sake, frog, don't bite the big one! If that's all you're expecting, Frogger 2 won't let you down, but don't say we told you so if the scripted events and engrossing level design aren't enough to hold your interest.

There's a good chance that, even if that occurs, the game's four-player mini-games and unlockable arcade levels will add some life to things when they start to get a bit tired. In the end, Frogger 2 remains one of the year's most pleasant surprises, and is an excellent fit for platforming fans, both young and old. Just do yourself a favor and skip the cinemas.

BRANDON JUSTICE

Dreamcast

FOR ACTION/ADVENTURE/ARTS/DRIVE/SPORTS/STRATEGY/SHOOTER/COMBAT/PLAYERS 1-4
ONLINE NO CODE 1 PRICE $29.95 1999/05/12

Score: 7

ZO'S GREAT. ZO'S OUR PAL.
DOES THE COMPETITION LOVE ZO AS MUCH AS WE DO? THEY MIGHT IF THEY KNEW WHAT
"ZO" STOOD FOR.

PlayStation.2

The logo for Seganet, featuring the word "SEGANET" in a stylized, blocky font. The letters "SEGA" are white on a dark blue background, and the letters "NET" are white on an orange background. A small trademark symbol (TM) is at the end.

The SageMath logo is a trademark of SEDA Corp., Inc. and may not be used in whole or in part without the express written permission of SEDA Corp. SEDA is registered in the US Patent and Trademark Office and is a trademark of Sage Enterprises, Ltd. © SEDA ENTERPRISES, LTD., 2006. All Rights Reserved.

RUSH 2049

Cheat Menu

Man, is there a lot of hidden stuff in this game! There are so many cheats. In fact, that Midway has created a whole Cheat Menu to list them. Getting to the Cheat Menu itself also takes a cheat code, and once it's opened, all the cheats listed will remain locked. Here's how you get the Cheat Menu to appear: While on the Main Menu, highlight Options and then press ▲ ▶ ○ △. The Cheat Menu option will

START GAME

PLAYERS

RECORDS

OPTIONS

AUDIO

VIDEO

WEB SITE

CHEATS

The Cheat Menu option will appear at the bottom of the screen when entered correctly.

appear at the bottom of the screen, and you can then select it like any other menu item. Once inside the Cheat Menu, you'll see a huge list of cheats for the game, but none will be active. This code just unlocks the Cheat Menu; it does not unlock any of the cheats—but at least now you know what cheats there are in the game.

Unlock Some Cheats

Now that you have the Cheat Menu screen, you're prob'ly anxious to try out some of the cheats listed. We don't have them all for you (check future issues for more) but we do have some—all of which are really tricky to enter. You have to press the button inputs smoothly and very quickly, or else they won't work. To enter a cheat, you need to have the Cheat Menu open and highlight the cheat you want to enter. Then enter the proper button sequence from the list below. The cheat will become active if done correctly, and you'll be able to turn the cheat on and off. It may take you several tries to get the cheats to work, but keep at it.

Track Orientation

Highlight Track Orientation on the cheat menu and then press and hold ▲ ▶ and then press ○. Release the buttons, then press ○, △, ○. Press and hold ▲ again and then press ○ again.

Super Tires

Highlight Super Tires on the cheat menu and then press hold ▶ while you press ○, △, ○. Release ▶ and then hold ▲ and press **○, **△, **○.

Brakes

Highlight Brakes on the cheat menu and then press ▶, ○, △, ○ and then press **▲ **▶ **○.

Increase Car Mass

Highlight Mass on the cheat menu and then press and hold ▲ while you press ○, △, ○. Release the ▲ button and then tap **▲.

Invisible Track

Highlight Invisible Track on the cheat menu and then press ▶, ○, △, ○, △, ○, △ and then press and hold ▲ ▶ and tap **▲.

Random Battle Mode Weapons

Highlight Random Weapons on the cheat menu and then press and hold ▲ ▶ and then press ○, △. Release the buttons and then press and hold ▶ ▲ and quickly tap **○, **△.

CHEATS

ALL PARTS	OFF
RESURRECT IN PLACE	OFF
FRAME SCALE	5
TRE SCALING	OFF
FOG COLOR	NORMAL
CAR COLORING	OFF
COMET MINES	OFF
CAR MINES	OFF
TRACK ORIENTATION	NORMAL
AUTO-ABORT	OFF
SUPER SPEED	ON
INVISIBLE	OFF
INVISIBLE CAR	OFF

Once you get the Cheat Menu open, you'll find that none of the cheats are active. You'll need individual codes to enter on this screen to unlock the different cheats.

CHEATS

SUPER SPEED	OFF
INVISIBLE	OFF
INVISIBLE CAR	OFF
INVISIBLE TRACK	OFF
BRAKES	ON
SUPER TIRES	ON
MASS	INACTIVE
SUICIDE MODE	OFF
BATTLE POINTS	OFF
DEMOLITION BATTLE	OFF
RANDOM WEAPONS	ON
ALL CARS	OFF
ALL TRACKS	OFF

After cheats are activated, you can turn them on and off at will—and some of them will even allow you to change the cheat's actual value.

Toggle Demolition Battle Mode

Highlight Demolition Battle on the cheat menu and press and hold ▲ ▶ and press ○, △. Release the buttons, then press and hold ▶ ▲ and then press ○. △ When Demolition Battle Mode is active the Random Battle Mode will be over-riden and every pick will be the battering ram so to defeat an opponent you have to actually smash them with your own car. Cool!

AEROWINGS 2

Unlock It All!

If you thought this game was cool, wait until you unlock all the planes! To do this without beating all the missions, press the ○ and ○ ▶ all at exactly the same time on the Main Menu. It may take several tries to get it up, so listen for the audio cue that lets you know that you were successful. Once entered, you'll find that two more environments open up (both in the snow), all the planes are available and that you can now play all of the Fighter Pilot Missions.

FREE FLIGHT

Map: 2 1

Base C

Noon

Weather:

Snowy

Map:

Northern fighter base. Also used as a civilian airport.

MESSAGE

The two bonus environments are located somewhere really cold, like Alaska, and in one of them, you get to fly in a snowstorm!

HIDDEN BATTLE

Map: 2 1

Base C

Noon

Weather:

Snowy

Map:

Northern fighter base. Also used as a civilian airport.

MESSAGE

The two bonus environments are located somewhere really cold, like Alaska, and in one of them, you get to fly in a snowstorm!

There are more planes hidden in the game than are in the game to begin with—and they are all killer, each with their own unique handling characteristics.

RUSH 2049

Cheat Menu

Man, is there a lot of hidden stuff in this game! There are so many cheats. In fact, that Midway has created a whole Cheat Menu to list them. Getting to the Cheat Menu itself also takes a cheat code, and once it's opened, all the cheats listed will remain locked. Here's how you get the Cheat Menu to appear: While on the Main Menu, highlight Options and then press ▲ ▶ ○ △. The Cheat Menu option will

START GAME

PLAYERS

RECORDS

OPTIONS

AUDIO

VIDEO

WEB SITE

CHEATS

The Cheat Menu option will appear at the bottom of the screen when entered correctly.

appear at the bottom of the screen, and you can then select it like any other menu item. Once inside the Cheat Menu, you'll see a huge list of cheats for the game, but none will be active. This code just unlocks the Cheat Menu; it does not unlock any of the cheats—but at least now you know what cheats there are in the game.

Unlock Some Cheats

Now that you have the Cheat Menu screen, you're prob'ly anxious to try out some of the cheats listed. We don't have them all for you (check future issues for more) but we do have some—all of which are really tricky to enter. You have to press the button inputs smoothly and very quickly, or else they won't work. To enter a cheat, you need to have the Cheat Menu open and highlight the cheat you want to enter. Then enter the proper button sequence from the list below. The cheat will become active if done correctly, and you'll be able to turn the cheat on and off. It may take you several tries to get the cheats to work, but keep at it.

Track Orientation

Highlight Track Orientation on the cheat menu and then press and hold ▲ ▶ and then press ○. Release the buttons, then press ○, △, ○. Press and hold ▲ again and then press ○ again.

Super Tires

Highlight Super Tires on the cheat menu and then press hold ▶ while you press ○, △, ○. Release ▶ and then hold ▲ and press **○, **△, **○.

Brakes

Highlight Brakes on the cheat menu and then press ▶, ○, △, ○ and then press **▲ **▶ **○.

Increase Car Mass

Highlight Mass on the cheat menu and then press and hold ▲ while you press ○, △, ○. Release the ▲ button and then tap **▲.

Invisible Track

Highlight Invisible Track on the cheat menu and then press ▶, ○, △, ○, △, ○, △ and then press and hold ▲ ▶ and tap **▲.

Random Battle Mode Weapons

Highlight Random Weapons on the cheat menu and then press and hold ▲ ▶ and then press ○, △. Release the buttons and then press and hold ▶ ▲ and quickly tap **○, **△.

CHEATS

ALL PARTS	OFF
RESURRECT IN PLACE	OFF
FRAME SCALE	5
TRE SCALING	OFF
FOG COLOR	NORMAL
CAR COLORING	OFF
COMET MINES	OFF
CAR MINES	OFF
TRACK ORIENTATION	NORMAL
AUTO-ABORT	OFF
SUPER SPEED	ON
INVISIBLE	OFF
INVISIBLE CAR	OFF

Once you get the Cheat Menu open, you'll find that none of the cheats are active. You'll need individual codes to enter on this screen to unlock the different cheats.

CHEATS

SUPER SPEED	OFF
INVISIBLE	OFF
INVISIBLE CAR	OFF
INVISIBLE TRACK	OFF
BRAKES	ON
SUPER TIRES	ON
MASS	INACTIVE
SUICIDE MODE	OFF
BATTLE POINTS	OFF
DEMOLITION BATTLE	OFF
RANDOM WEAPONS	ON
ALL CARS	OFF
ALL TRACKS	OFF

After cheats are activated, you can turn them on and off at will—and some of them will even allow you to change the cheat's actual value.

Toggle Demolition Battle Mode

Highlight Demolition Battle on the cheat menu and press and hold ▲ ▶ and press ○, △. Release the buttons, then press and hold ▶ ▲ and then press ○. △ When Demolition Battle Mode is active the Random Battle Mode will be over-riden and every pick will be the battering ram so to defeat an opponent you have to actually smash them with your own car. Cool!

THIS MONTH

NBAH MASSEY for the people

RUSH 2049

Aerowings 2 106

Wacky Races

Sega Bass Fishing

ESPN: Int'l Track & Field

Fur Fighters 107

Magforce Racing

NBA Showtime:

NBA on NBC 108

WACKY RACES

The Wacky Codes You Were Looking For!

When a game has a Cheat Menu, it's not a long stretch to assume that there are cheats out there to enter into it out there somewhere. Well, here they are—and they enable you to unlock all the extra cars, abilities, tracks and even a capacity to make the game more difficult without having to go through the entire thing. The Cheat Menu is found in the main hub area that you're in right after you choose your car, where all the different levels branch off from. Just drive up to the sign on top of the green hill in the middle of the area and you'll open a menu. From this menu, select the Cheats option from the bottom. Once there, enter any of the following codes:

Drive up to the sign post on the hill in the center of the main hub area once you've picked a car to find the Cheat Menu.

WACKYSPOILERS

All Cars

WACKYGIVEAWAY

All Challenges And Tracks

CRACKEDNAILS

Extra Hard Mode

BARGAINBASEMENT

All Abilities

As codes are entered, you can see them listed on the Code Collection screen and you can turn them on and off at will.

SEGA BASS FISHING

Change Lure Color In Original Mode

Here's a little undocumented feature that you may not have known about. When playing in the Original Mode, you can change the color of your lure by pressing ▲ or ▼ on your controller while the lure is highlighted. Unfortunately, the color of the lure doesn't effect the outcome of the game.

Wow, the same lure sporting a new color scheme!

Play As The Girl In Arcade Mode

You can play as fisherwoman in the Original Mode, simply by selecting her when prompted to choose a character—but in Arcade, you're forced to play as the dude. What a bummer! Well, Arcade Mode is no longer a man's game. Now you can play as the chick, by pressing the ○ + ○ buttons at the Arcade Mode Area Selection Screen.

Arcade Mode is no longer a man's game in Sega Bass Fishing!

ESPN: INT. TRACK & FIELD

Metallic Athletes

Don't you wish you could play as the cool looking metallic character from the demo modes within Konami's International Track And Field? Well, now you can, and you get to try more colors than just the metallic silver. By entering in names of cities that have hosted the Summer Olympic games, you can play as different metallic athletes in any event. Just start a game in Trial Mode and when prompted to enter a name enter one of the countries from the list below to get the desired metallic color.

Just enter names of cities that have hosted the Summer Olympics into the name entry screen in Trial Mode to play as a metallic character.

Metallic Color

Gold
Silver
Bronze
Copper
Cream
Blue
Aluminum
Green
Red
Grey
Orange
Purple

City Entered

MONTREAL
SYDNEY
HELSINKI
ROMA
MOSCOW
LA
MUNICH
MEXICO
TOKYO
ATHENS
ATLANTA
SEUL

FUR FIGHTERS

Mini-Game Cheats

As is the trend these days with hidden extras in a game, Fur Fighters makes you earn your cheats rather than including straight codes to unlock things. Therefore, the way you unlock cheats is actually to play through the game. Actually, you have to play the Mini-Games which are unlocked as you beat bosses. Once you open a Mini-Game and start to play it you can unlock secrets by meeting specific requirements within the Mini-Game, like beating the game within a certain time or getting above a given amount of points. Below, we've listed the cheat you unlock, what the cheat does, which Mini-Game you unlock it in, and the requirements to meet to earn the secret.

Bomber Bear

Earn 30,000 points

Boss Cheats

More cheats are unlocked by beating the various bosses in the game a second time

Auto Aim

Boss: Gwynth
Locking on to enemies becomes 100% accurate

Health Boost

Boss: Juanita
Have even more health the next time you play through

Ammo Boost

Boss: Claude
Get the max amount of ammo each time you pick up a weapon

Rotation Cam

Using a second controller press ○ to make the camera spin around player.

Snake Classic

Earn 5,000 Points

Balloon Lift

Earn 10,000 points

Bear Attack

Earn 10,000 points

Super Snake

Earn 10,000 points

Paul's 3D Esmeralda

Apparently, if you cross your eyes while this mode is on the graphics appear 3D

Tough Bears

Boss: Winnie and Mal
Makes all the bears in the game twice as tough to beat

Invulnerable

Boss: Viggo
Never die again

Scrappers

Complete the maze in the Temple Of Doom
Makes animals in the game really thin

NBA SHOWTIME: NBA ON NBC

Hidden Characters

All of the following are hidden characters as which you can play. To get them to appear, enter the name and PIN number from the list below into he enter name and PIN screen.

Bring on the hidden characters. We heard that one of the Army Men is in there somewhere.

Big alien
BIGGY
0958

Chad Edmunds
CHAD
0628

Crown
CRISPY
2084

Greg Outler
CUTLER
1111

Isiah Thomas
THOMAS
1111

Kerri (female)
KERRI
0220

Kerri in alt.
uniform
KERRI
1111

Lia (female)
LIA
0712

Lia in alt. uniform
LIA
1111

Nikko dog
NIKKO
6666

Old man
OLDMAN
2001

Pinto Horse
PINTO
1966 Pumpkin
JACKO
1031

Referee
THEREF
7777

Retro Rob
RETRO
1970

Shawn Lipkat
LIPKAT
0114

Small alien
SMALLS
0856

Tim Kitzrow
TIMK
7785
White horse
HORSE
1966

Willy Morris
WIL
0101

Wizard
THEWIZ
1136

Mascots

Not only are there some goofy hidden characters to play as but you can also play as any of the mascots from the NBA. To choose to play as one of your favorite mascots just look up the team their from on the list below and enter the name and PIN listed next to it into the name entry screen.

This is Grandma Gorilla, mascot of the now-defunct Phoenix Futos. We think.

Atlanta Hawks
HAWK
0322

Charlotte Hornets
HORNET
1105

Chicago Bulls
BENNY 0503

Denver Nuggets
ROCKY 0201

Houston Rockets TURBO
1111

Indiana Pacers
BOOMER
0604

Minnesota Timberwolves
CRUNCH
0503

New Jersey Nets
SLY
6765

Phoenix Suns
GORILA
0314

Seattle Sonics
SASQUA
7785

Toronto Raptors RAPTOR
1020

Utah Jazz BEAR
1228

MAGFORCE RACING

Magnetic Cheats

If you are looking for all the cheats to this unusual racer then you've come to the right place. First of all we've got the code to unlock everything and then once you've gotten a chance to check out everything in the game you'll have to try one of the gameplay codes which will add a twist to the game.

Enter the cheat that unlocks everything in at the Main Menu.

All Tracks And Tripsods

To unlock everything in the game just go to the Main Menu and highlight the Tripod Select Option. Now press and hold 3 + Y and then press 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 0. Now just enter the game and if you entered the code right you should have the entire game spread wide open before you.

Gameplay Cheats

To enter the following cheats which will make your racing experience a bit more interesting, you must first reach the High Score screen by earning a high score on any track using any tripod. Then enter one of the cheats below to get the desired result. Getting a high score shouldn't be too tough unless you've gone through and set amazing scores for all the tracks already. You don't need to come in first to get a high score. The cheat will only affect your next race if you select the race Restart option right after you enter the cheat into the high score screen. If you return to the Main Menu, the cheat will be reset.

RETRO 8bit Sound Effect

Sound effects will sound like they came out of an old 8bit game.

AUTOM Auto Pilot Turbo Ram

Whenever you activate the Turbo Ram the computer will take over and keep you from running into the wall.

JOHNM Become John Malkovich
Renames menu items and weapons
Malkovich.

GHOST Transparent Tripods
Makes all tripods and weapon pick-ups transparent.

MISSI Triple Missile Pick-Ups
Every pick-up in the game becomes a Triple Missile.

Once the cheat to get it all is entered, just enter the tripod selection screen or the track selection screen to check out all the cool stuff you've been missing since this game is so hard to play

Basically all you have to do is finish a race—you can even finish last and still be able to enter a name into the High Score screen. When you do that, enter GHOST as your name to get transparent tripod things.

TURBO Turbo Ram Pick-Ups
Every pick-up in the game becomes a Turbo Ram.

WIN

 Dreamcast

LOSE

- Sleep
- Any semblance of personal hygiene
- All pigment in your skin
- The use of your lower extremities
- The love of your pets
- The remainder of your youth
- The interest in anything that isn't pixilated
- The loving touch of anything that lives and breathes
- Your grip on reality

That's a fair trade.

Hollywood Video® is giving away 3 Dreamcast™ deluxe packages. Enter automatically with every game rental visit. Or you can enter at www.hollywoodvideo.com. Package includes a new Dreamcast system and 2 new release games.

See our website for complete official rules. Winners drawn Monday, January 8, 2001.

©2000 Hollywood Entertainment Corp.

INVITE YOUR FRIENDS OVER FOR SOME FOUR PLAY.

Revolutionary
4 Player Battles!
Huge 3-D
Multi-Level Stages!

Over 120
Usable Items!
Battle
Huge Bosses!

"...a great party game!"
- Next Gen

"Powerstone 2
is the future of fighting games!"
- Game Fan

Sega
Dreamcast.

CAPCOM
WWW.CAPCOM.COM

© CAPCOM CO., LTD. 2000. © CAPCOM U.S.A., INC. 2000. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. CAPCOM and the CAPCOM LOGO are registered trademarks of CAPCOM CO., LTD. POWERSTONE 2 and CAPCOM EDGE are trademarks of CAPCOM CO., LTD. Sega, Dreamcast and the Dreamcast logo are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Sega Enterprises, Ltd. The ratings icon is a trademark of the Interactive Digital Software Association.

Parting Shots

"Ever bowl a three-hundred-and-one?" asked Evan. Over and over, all day. On deadline, even. At first we tried to ignore him, tipped off by his smirk that there was some kind of gag here...

WEEK ONE

Evan, horrified at the idea of reviewing Test Drive Le Mans by playing it for 24 hours with Chris and Fran, tries everything—including making himself physically sick—to get out of the job. He refuses to practice with the game. Fran is down, but she's more down with the cover story. Emailed note from Fran about the cover: "The next cover is very dear to me (sniff), so please make it as good as you can. Y'know, for all the pixies out there."

WEEK TWO

Evan brings in a note signed "Evan's Doctor" excusing him from playing racing games for the entire issue. Chris, deep in a Le Mans haze, has already read for 20 hours at home. Fran disappears.

WEEK THREE

Two days later we get a fragmentary, handwritten note from Fran delivered by a motorcycle rider who says his name is Dan (not Dan the Art Director, he's on his honeymoon. This is like a special guest star Dan). It reads: "Made contact with the plate underground... 40 hours into Skies... Gravel is waiting... No Le Mans for me..." At the bottom are two URLs. One for an illustrator in LA, Niska. One that leads to Singapore, where our inquiries are answered in perfect English by someone who goes only by F Sc. Winnie days, brilliant renditions of game characters and Christmas scenes begin flooding our FTP server.

WEEK FOUR

Fran returns with scores of hours of RPGs playing under her belt. Dave is nearly dead from putting the mag out by himself. Chris, despite having played the 24 hours of Le Mans by himself already, is suggesting we all play it for 24 hours again, anyway. And Evan? Evan keeps asking that damn question. Finally Dina bites. "Look, Evan, you can't bowl three-hundred-and-one. Three hundred is the highest score." Evan looks at her with satisfaction. "You ever bowl three-hundred-and-one?" he asks. Grown...

QUESTION OF THE MONTH

What's your favorite food?

Dan: Quarter Pounder with Cheese. I once ate one every day for three weeks.
Dina: Anything orange.
Fran: Healing herbs. Not.
Chris: The Captain's Sampler Platter.
Evan: A Korean vegetable dish called Bimbimbop. I think.
Dave: Chicken. I have seven chicken cookbooks, you know.

Critical Magazine
Dreamcast

Imagine Media, Inc., 150 North Hill Drive
Burlington, CA 94005

EDITORIAL

DCM@criticalmagazine.com

ADVERTISING

415.465.4114 x100 fax 415.465.4108 email: info@criticalmagazine.com

SUBSCRIPTION INQUIRIES

Customer Service
P.O. Box 52860
San Jose, CA 95152

email: subscribe@criticalmagazine.com

http://www.criticalmagazine.com/servlet/Jsp?index=170

PRINTS: 71,481,800

ODCM REGULARS

Chris Cheris: editor-in-chief
Joe Fitzgerald: manager
Don Fager: managing editor
Francesca Reyes: senior editor
Dave-an-Corder: associate art director
Evan Shumway: associate editor
Chickalope Kagilant: group correspondent

SUPPORTING CAST/EDITORIAL
Evo Bratcher: David Chen, Mike D'Amico, Blake Fischer, Brandon Jacobs, Noah Mearns, Greg Shavano, Jim Preston, Rob Seneca

COVER ART (Illustration by Yuuta Kaneko, ©2000 Game Arts Co. Ltd.)
ILLUSTRATIONS: Niska C., F. Sc., Gary, Semtex, Dan, Zurg

ILLUSTRATIONS/GENIUSES: Niska C., F. Sc., PHOTOGRAPHY: Mark Madala, Michael S. Jones

ADVERTISING

Deey: Paula: publisher
Armen: Shoukhi: regional advertising manager
Jim: Mitchell: regional advertising manager
Tim: Kennedy: national ads, training manager
Morgan: Fischer: ad coordinator
Tiffany: Song: sales coordinator

PRODUCTION

Richard: Krasnow: production director
Gwen: Butler: production coordinator

CIRCULATION

Amey: Nihil: subscription director
Jonathan: Walker: newsletter/marketing manager
Joey: Lamborn: direct marketing specialist
Peggy: Moore: fulfillment manager

INTERNATIONAL LICENSING REPRESENTATIVE

Robert: J. Armstrong and Associates, Inc.
720 Post Road, Secaucus, New York 10093

©2000 Imagine Media, Inc. All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without permission in writing from Imagine Media, Inc. This publication is intended for use as a guide only. The publisher assumes no responsibility for any errors or omissions. The publisher assumes no responsibility for any damage or loss of any kind, including but not limited to, the loss of data, equipment, or other property, arising from the use of this publication. The publisher assumes no responsibility for any damage or loss of any kind, including but not limited to, the loss of data, equipment, or other property, arising from the use of this publication. The publisher assumes no responsibility for any damage or loss of any kind, including but not limited to, the loss of data, equipment, or other property, arising from the use of this publication.

PRODUCED AND PRINTED IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

imagine
media

Don: Anderson: CEO
Tom: Anderson: vice president/COO
Amy: Nihil: vice president/circulation
Steve: Lickman: vice president/training resources
Charles: Schulz: general counsel
Cheryl: England: president/corporate director
Markus: Adams: president/business director
IMAGINE ENTERTAINMENT DIVISION
Jonathan: Shuman: CEO
Matt: Pines: vice president/circulation director
Simon: Whitcombe: publishing director future

©2000 Future Publishing, Inc. All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without permission in writing from Future Publishing, Inc. This publication is intended for use as a guide only. The publisher assumes no responsibility for any errors or omissions. The publisher assumes no responsibility for any damage or loss of any kind, including but not limited to, the loss of data, equipment, or other property, arising from the use of this publication. The publisher assumes no responsibility for any damage or loss of any kind, including but not limited to, the loss of data, equipment, or other property, arising from the use of this publication.

Next Issue

As good as it gets!

Issue #11 with GD-ROM
On sale December 26th!

PHANTASY STAR ONLINE!

It's on its way to the US—and we have the lowdown on what the game's all about, straight from Yuji Naka. Prepare to read our in-depth review on the first console online RPG ever!

PHANTASY STAR ONLINE

REVIEW OVERLOAD, PT.2!

You've got cash to spare from the holidays and scads of games ready to exchange, but which titles are worth the investment? Look no further than one hella super jam-packed review section in our next issue!

... And more!!

- Toe Jam & Earl 3 Revealed!
- New NAOMI 2 games! Cool!
- Secret Sega titles Exposed!
- Forbidden Games Explored!

*Nika it and forever be damned to a life full of bed tossed games. Content (but not quality) of issue subject to change due to Mito Hito jets.

Oops! We made a mistake in calling Crane's upcoming jetset title Surf Rocket Racer. Instead of its real name: Surf Rocket Racer in ODCM issue 09. Sorry!

THE GRINCH™

As the grumpidy Grinch, your mission is clear.

To Slime, stomp and Smash everything far and near.

With Gizmos and Gadgets, a heart that's too small Disrupt all in Whoville, from short Whos to tall.

And why should your grinchy ways bring such pride?

For that warm, fuzzy feeling it gives you inside.

"The Grinch" interactive game © 2000 Universal Interactive Studios, Inc. Based on "How the Grinch Stole Christmas" book and character™ & © Dr. Seuss Enterprises, L.P. 1957. Licensed by Universal Studios Licensing, Inc. Published and distributed by Konami Corporation. All Rights Reserved. PlayStation and the PlayStation logos are registered trademarks of Sony Computer Entertainment Inc. Sega, Dreamcast and the Dreamcast logo are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Sega Enterprises, Ltd. Game Boy and Game Boy Color are trademarks of Nintendo of America Inc. © 1999, 1998 Nintendo of America Inc. The ratings icon is a registered trademark of the Interactive Digital Software Association. Konami® is a registered trademark of Konami Co., Ltd. © 2000 Konami.

A green, furry Grinch character with yellow eyes and a mischievous grin is holding a large, yellow, crumpled piece of paper. He is holding a yellow pencil in his right hand, poised to write. The background is a simple light blue sky with white clouds.

To Do List

Rotten Egg Target Practice Test Rocket Spring on Max
Grease Copter Propeller
Triple-Check Love Shield
Practice Grinchy Looks
Buy Tub-O-Slime

WANT A BRAWL? MAKE IT A DOUBLE.

STREET FIGHTER DOUBLE IMPACT

Street Fighter® fans everywhere get a double-dose of double-trouble with Street Fighter III: Double Impact. This explosive street brawl for the Sega Dreamcast™ contains TWO arcade hits on one disc – Street Fighter III: New Generation and Street Fighter III: Second Impact. Loaded with a new legion of fighters, Street Fighter III: Double Impact is double dynamite!

CAPCOM
WWW.CAPCOM.COM

Sega
Dreamcast.

© CAPCOM CO., LTD. 2000. IN JAPAN © CAPCOM CO., LTD. 2000. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. CAPCOM and the CAPCOM LOGO are registered trademarks of CAPCOM CO., LTD. STREET FIGHTER is a registered trademark of CAPCOM CO., LTD. STREET FIGHTER III: DOUBLE IMPACT and CAPCOM EDGE are trademarks of CAPCOM CO., LTD. © CAPCOM CO., LTD. 2000. Sega, Dreamcast and the Dreamcast logo are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Sega Enterprises, LTD. The Sega logo is a trademark of the International Digital Software Association.